παρακλήτος, ου, ὁ [paráklētos] (παρακαλέω) originally meant in the passive sense (BGU 601, 12 [II a.d.] παρακλήτος δέδωκα αὐτῷ='when I was asked I gave to him', but π. is restored from παράκλος, and the restoration is uncertain), 'one who is called to someone's aid'. Accordingly Latin writers commonly rendered it, in its NT occurrences, with 'advocatus' (Tertullian, Prax. 9; Cyprian, De Domin. Orat. 3, Epist. 55, 18; Novatian, De Trin. 28; 29; Hilary, De Trin. 8, 19; Lucifer, De S. Athanas. 2, 26; Augustine, C. Faust. 13, 17, Tract. in Joh. 94; Tractatus Orig. 20 p. 212, 13 Batiffol. Field, Notes 102f; cp. the role of the 'patronus' in legal proceedings: J-MDavid, Le patronat judiciaire au dernier siècle de la république romaine '92). But the technical mng. 'lawyer', 'attorney' is rare (e.g. Bion of Borysthenes [III b.c.] in Diog. L. 4, 50; SEG XXXVIII, 1237, 18 [235/36 a.d.]). Against the legal association: KGrayston, JSNT 13, '81, 67–82. In the few places where the word is found in pre-Christian and extra-Christian lit. as well it has for the most part a more general sense: one who appears in another's behalf, mediator, intercessor, helper (Demosth. 19, 1; Dionys. Hal. 11, 37, 1; Heraclit. Sto. 59 p. 80, 19; Cass. Dio 46, 20, 1; POxy 2725, 10 [71 a.d.]); cp. π. as the name of a gnostic aeon Iren. 1, 4, 5 [Harv. I 38, 8]; Hippol.; s. also the comments on 2 Cor 5:20 s.v. παρακαλέω 2). The pass. idea of παρακεκλησθαι retreated into the background, and the active idea of παρακαλεῖν took its place (on the justification for equating παράκλητος with παρακαλῶν s. Kühner-Bl. II 289). Jews adopted it in this sense as a loanw. (טַרְכֵּי־פֶּרֶךְ. Pirke Aboth 4, 11.—SKrauss, Griech. u. latein. Lehnwörter in Talmud, Midrasch u. Targum 1898/99 I 210; II 496; Dalman, Gramm.² 185; Billerb. II 560–62). In Job 16:2 Aq. and Theod. translate מְנַחֵם (=comforters) as παράκλητοι; LXX has παρακλητορες. In Philo our word somet. means 'intercessor' (De Jos. 239, Vi. Mos. 2, 134, Spec. Leg. 1, 237, Exsecr. 166, Adv. Flacc. 13; 22), somet. 'adviser', 'helper' (Op. M. 23; 165). The Gk. interpreters of John's gosp. understood it in the active sense= παρακαλῶν or παρακλητωρ (s. Lampe s.v. παράκλητο, esp. Eusebius of Caesarea, Theodore of Mopsuestia, and Ammonius; s. also Ephraem the Syrian in RHarris, Fragments of the Comm. of Ephrem Syr. 1895, 86). In our lit. the act. sense helper, intercessor is suitable in all occurrences of the word (so Goodsp, Probs. 110f). τίς ἡμῶν παράκλητος ἔσται; 2 Cl 6:9. πλουσίων παράκλητοι advocates of the rich B 20:2; D 5:2.—In 1J 2:1 (as AcJ in a damaged fragment: POxy 850, 10) Christ is designated as παράκλητος: παράκλητον ἔχομεν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν δίκαιον we have Jesus Christ the righteous one, who intercedes for us. The same title is implied for Christ by the ἄλλος παράκλητος of J 14:16. Ap. 1, 229). 1 to enclose an object or area on all sides, put around, surround. The word is used freq. (even in the LXX) as a military t.t. (cp. παρεμβολή), but w. var. mnsgs., depending on tactics used. παρεμβάλλουσιν οἱ ἐχθροὶ σου χάρακά σοι your enemies will throw up a palisade against you Lk 19:43 (v.l. περιβάλλουσιν; D has βάλλουσιν ἐπὶ σέ). Cp. Is 29:3 βαλὼν περὶ σέ χάρακα; 37:33 οὐδὲ μὴ κυκλώσῃ ἐπ' αὐτὴν χάρακα. Interpretations differ, depending on whether one views the text as actual prophecy (patterned after texts like those of Is cited above) or as prophecy after the event, in which case the earthworks constructed by soldiers under Titus (Jos., B. 5, 11, 4: 466) might be meant. 2 to put someth. in between, insinuate, fig., of anger παρεμβάλλει ἑαυτὴν εἰς τὴν καρδίαν it insinuates itself into the heart Hm 5, 2, 2.—M-M.

The use of π. as a t.t. has developed in two directions. On the one hand the word served as a sacred expr. for the coming of a hidden divinity, who makes his presence felt by a revelation of his power, or whose presence is celebrated in the cult (Diod S 3, 65, 1 ἡ τοῦ θεοῦ π. of Dionysus upon earth; 4, 3, 3; Ael. Epidaurus: SIG 1169, 34).—On the other hand, π. became the official term for a visit of a person of high rank, esp. of kings and emperors visiting a province (Polyb. 18, 48, 4; CIG 4896, 8f; SIG 495, 85f; 741, 21; 30; UPZ 42, 18 [162 b.c.]; PTebt 48, 14; 116, 57 [both II b.c.]; O. These two technical expressions can approach each other closely in mng., can shade off into one another, or even coincide (Ins. von Tegea: BCH 25, 1901 p. 275 ἔτους ξθ' ἀπὸ τῆς θεοῦ Ἀδριανοῦ τὸ πρῶτον ἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα παρουσίας).—Herm. Wr. 1, 26 uses π. of the advent of the pilgrim in the eighth sphere. α of Christ, and nearly always of his Messianic Advent in glory to judge the world at the end of this age: Mt 24:3 (PSchoonheim, Een semasiolog. onderzoek van π. '53); 1 Cor 1:8 v.l.; 15:23; 2 Th 2:8 (on the expr. ἐπιφάνεια παρουσίας s. FPFister, Pauly-W. Suppl. πάσχα, τό [[páscha]] indecl. (Aram. ܦܫܚܐ or ܦܫܚܐ for Hebr. פסח.—LXX, Philo, Joseph., Just., Mel., Did.) 1 an annual Israelite festival commemorating Israel’s exodus from Egypt, the Passover, celebrated on the 14th of the month Nisan, and continuing into the early hours of the 15th (Jos., Ant. 3, 284f; s. also Ex 12–13; cp. Mishnah, Pesachim). This was followed immediately by the Feast of Unleavened Bread (Mazzoth; ἄζυμος 2) on the 15th to 21st. Popular usage merged the two festivals and treated them as a unity, as they were for practical purposes (s. Lk 22:1 and Mk 14:12 below.—So also Philo and Joseph.: GAmadon, ATR 27, ’45, 109–115; cp. πάσχω [páschō] fut. 3 sg. παθεῖται (2 Cl 7:5; v.l. πείσεται; cp. Reinhold p. 74; B-D-F §74, 3), 3 pl. παθούνται Hs 8, 10, 4; 2 aor. ἔπαθον; pf. πέπονθα, ptc. πεπονθώς; plpf. 3 pl. ἐπεπόνθεισαν Wsd 18:1 (Hom.+)' to experience someth., be treated' (π. expresses the passive idea corresponding to the active idea in ποιέω) of everything that befalls a person, whether good or ill. Yet its usage developed in such a way that π. came to be used less and less frequently in a good sense, and never thus without some clear indication, at least fr. the context, that the good sense is meant. In our lit. it is found 1 only once in the sense *experience someth. Betz, Gal. 134. 2 Likew. there is only one place in which π. has a neutral mng. LXX passages [e.g. Ps 67:7 ἐξάγων πεπεδημένους], has come into the context of Is 42:7). The emendation πεπεδημένοι (for πεπηδημένοι) has been suggested for AcPl BMM verso 5, but Sanders, favoring Septuagint usage of ἐκπηδάω (q.v. 3) restores: [οἱ ἐ] γ σκοτία θαν[άτου ἐκ] πεπηδημένοι lines 4f (s. his note). The text continues: φῶς ἀνέτειλεν ὑμῖν and with the form πεπεδημένοι (which also fits in the lacuna of AcPl Ha 8, 32f) can be rendered for you, fettered in the darkness of death, the light has shined (cp. τοὺς νεκροὺς ... πεπεδημένους καὶ τεθλιμμένους ἐν σκότῳ καὶ γνόφῳ ἐντὸς τοῦ Ἀιδου Cleopatra p. 15 ln. 44). But Sanders is reluctant to "accept an emendation in a manuscript so carefully written and belonging to the third century" (HTR 31, '38, 87) and interprets 'those who are living (sinfully) in the darkness of death'.—DELG s.v. πέδη.

πειθός, ῆ, ὄν [[peithós]] (fr. πείθ[ω]) persuasive ἐν πειθοῖς σοφίας λόγοις in persuasive words of wisdom 1 Cor 2:4. The word is found nowhere but here; its attestation is extremely good (as early as P⁴⁶), though it is in a context that is subject to considerable variation in detail (the situation is well reviewed in Ltzm., Hdb. ad loc.). The word is formed quite in accordance w. st. Gk. usage (cp. φειδός 'sparing' fr. φείδομαι), and the Gk. Fathers let it pass without comment (so Ltzm., Bachmann, Sickenberger, Herm-vSoden; Mlt-H. 78). Despite this, many (e.g. Heinrici, Schmiedel, JWeiss) reject this word because of its rarity and prefer the explanation that it originated in dittography of the ς (or perh. through an error in hearing the passage dictated): ἐν πειθοῖ σοφίας, s. πειθώ; B-D-F §47, 4; 112; W-S. §16, 3 n. 20; Rob. 157; GZuntz, The Text of the Epistles '53, 23–25.—Rdm.² p. 63 takes πειθοῖς as a rare genitive formation from πειθώ, influenced by the dat. πειθοῖ; the mng. then would be 'words of persuasion from wisdom (herself)'.—DELG s.v. πείθομαι B. Jos., Vi. 151 πρὸς ὀλίγον ἐπείθοντο=they were nearly persuaded), prob. meant ironically. Bauer considered it prob. that the rdg. of the text be understood as a combination of the two expressions ‘in a short time you are persuading me to become a Christian’ and ‘in a short time you will make me a Christian’, so that the sense is someth. like you are in a hurry to persuade me and make a Christian of me (so Goodsp, Probs. 137f [but it is not clear whether “make” here is to be understood in the sense ‘play the part of’]. περικάθαρμα, ατος, τό [[perikátharma]] fr. περικαθαίρω='cleanse all around' or 'on all sides'; that which is removed as a result of a thorough cleansing, dirt, refuse, off-scouring, also as a designation of the 'off-scouring' of humanity (Epict. 3, 22, 78; Vi. Aesopi G 14 P.; cp. 1QH 5:21). Since purification is achieved by the removal of the περικάθαρμα, the word can take on the mng. propitiatory offering, ransom (Pr 21:18). ὡς περικαθάρματα τοῦ κόσμου ἐγενήθημεν we have become like the off-scourings of the world 1 Cor 4:13. But since π. is pl. in contrast to the foll. περίψημα (q.v., as well as κάθαρμα) it has been proposed to transl. (s. earlier edd. of this lexicon and Spicq. III 94f) scapegoats for the world. On the other hand, the expr. is similar to τὰ γὰρ λύματα καὶ καθάρματα τῇ χώρᾳ ὅλη Jos., Bell. 4, 241, a description of unsavory characters, and the initial ὦ suggests the perception, wholly negative, that Paul's activity generates in the 'world'.—DELG s.v. καθαρός. But reflection on the fact that the removal of the περίψ. cleanses the thing or the pers. to which (whom) it was attached, has given the word the further mng. ransom, scapegoat, sacrifice (cp. Tob 5:19. Hesychius equates it w. περικατάμαγμα [cp. καταμάσσω ‘wipe off’] and ἀντίλυτρα, ἀντίψυχα. Photius p. 425, 3 explains περίψ. w. ἀπολύτρωσις and then continues, referring to the custom of making a human sacrifice every year for the benefit of the rest of the people [s. on this Ltzm. and JWeiss on 1 Cor 4:13]: οὕτως ἐπέλεγον τῷ κατ’ ἐνιαυτὸν ἐμβαλλομένῳ τῇ θαλάσῃ νεανία ἐπ’ ἀπαλλαγῇ τῶν συνεχόντων κακῶν περίψημα ἡμῶν γενοῦ· ἦτοι σωτηρία καὶ ἀπολύτρωσις. καὶ οὕτως ἐνέβαλον τῇ θαλάσῃ ὥσανεὶ τῷ Ποσειδῶνι θυσίαν ἀποτινύντες ‘in this wise they spoke over the young man who was being cast into the sea in accordance with annual custom for deliverance from afflictions: “Be our means of cleansing; in truth, our salvation and deliverance.” And so they cast him into the sea, a sacrificial payment in full, as it were, to Poseidon.’). But it must also be observed that περίψ. had become more and more a term of polite self-depreciation, common enough in everyday speech (Dionys. of Alex. in Eus., HE 7, 22, 7 τὸ δημῶδες ῥῆμα. S. also the grave-inscription [in WThieling, D. Hellenismus in Kleinafrika 1911, p. 34] in which a wife says w. reference to her deceased husband ἐγὼ σου περίψημα τῆς καλῆς ψυχῆς); the sense would then be someth. like most humble servant. surname of the head of the circle of Twelve Disciples, whose name was orig. Simon. His father was a certain John (s. Ἰωάννης 4) or Jonah (s. Ἰωνᾶς 2). Acc. to J 1:44 he himself was from Bethsaida, but, at any rate, when he met Jesus he lived in Capernaum (Mk 1:21, 29). Fr. that city he and his brother Andrew made their living as fishers (Mk 1:16). He was married (Mk 1:30; cp. 1 Cor 9:5), but left his home and occupation, when Jesus called, to follow him (Mk 1:18; 10:28). He belonged to the three or four most intimate of the Master's companions (Mk 5:37; 9:2; 13:3; 14:33). He stands at the head of the lists of the apostles (Mt 10:2; Mk 3:16; Lk 6:14; Ac 1:13). Not all the problems connected w. the conferring of the name Cephas-Peter upon Simon (s. Σίμων 1) have yet been solved (the giving of a new name and the reason for it: Plato [s. ὀνομάζω 1] and Theophrastus [Vi. Platonis 2 ln. 21 in Biog. p. 388 W.= Prolegom. 1 in CHermann, Pla. He was at least not always a model of rock-like (πέτρος is a symbol of imperturbability Soph., Oed. Rex 334; Eur., Med. 28 al.) firmness (note Gethsemane, the denial, the unsuccessful attempt at walking on water; his conduct at Antioch Gal 2:11ff which, though, is fr. time to time referred to another Cephas; s. HBetz, Gal [Hermeneia] p. 105f w. n. 442). Despite all this he was the leader of Jesus' disciples, was spokesman for the Twelve (e.g. Mt 18:21; 19:27; Mk 8:27ff; Lk 12:41; 18:28) and for the three who were closest to Jesus (Mk 9:5); he was recognized as leader even by those on the outside (Mt 17:24). He is especially prominent in the pronouncement made Mt 16:18. Only in the Fourth Gospel does Peter have a place less prominent than another, in this case the 'disciple whom Jesus loved' (s. Hdb. exc. on J 13:23). In connection w. the miraculous events after Jesus' death (on this ELohmeyer, Galiläa u. Jerusalem '36; WMichaelis, D. Erscheinungen d. Auferstandenen '44; MWerner, D. ntl. Berichte üb. d. Erscheinungen d. Auferstandenen: Schweiz. Theol. Umschau '44) Pt. played a unique role: 1 Cor 15:5; Lk 24:34; Mk 16:7. He was one of the pillars of the early church (Gal 2:9 [Κηφᾶς]). Three years after Paul was converted, on his first journey to Jerusalem as a Christian, he established a significant contact w. Peter: Gal 1:18. At least until the time described in Gal 2:1–10 (cp. Ac 15:7) he was prob. the head of the early Christian community/church. He was also active as a missionary to Israel Gal 2:8; cp. 1 Cor 9:5 (Κηφᾶς).—MGoguel, L'apôtre Pierre a-t-il joué un rôle personnel dans les crises de Grèce et de Galatie?: RHPR 14, '34, 461–500.—In 1 Pt 1:1 and 2 Pt 1:1 he appears as author of an epistle. Isid. 166 of spiritual growth: αὔξεσθαι κατὰ πῆχυν; Epict. 3, 2, 10 γέγονέ σου τὸ ψυχάριον ἀντὶ δακτυλίου δὶ πῆχυν=your little soul, as long as a finger, has become two cubits in length [because you were praised]). This expression has produced two major lines of interpr.: as ref. to length of life (s. ἡλικία 1a and cp. Mimnermus 2, 3 Diehl² πῆχυιον ἐπὶ χρόνον=‘for only a cubit of time’) add a single hour to your span of life NRSV; cp. Betz, SM p. 475f; as ref. to bodily growth add one cubit to your height / add a cubit to your stature NRSV mg. The former has been commended because the addition of a cubit in the sense of time appears to be a small matter, whereas a πῆχυς of bodily stature is monstrously large (Alcaeus, Fgm. 50 D.² gives the measurement of an enormous giant as less than 5 cubits). But this objection fails to take account of freq. use of hyperbole in the dominical discourse. Moreover, the context of both pass. deals with food and clothing. Food provides the nourishment that sustains growth as well as life. Disciples do not grow to their present heights by worrying. The description ἐλάχιστον (Lk 12:26) appears to be an exquisite bit of irony climaxing the hyperbole.—B. 236f. DELG. M-M.

Here he understands π. as an unquestioning belief in God's power to aid people with miracles, the faith that 'moves mountains' 13:2 (cp. Mt 17:20.—21:21; s. 2a above). This special kind of faith may be what the disciples had in mind when they asked πρόσθετες ἡμῖν πίστιν Lk 17:5; cp. vs. 6. τῇ πίστει φερόμενος ὁ Παῦλος AcPl Ha 5, 1. ζ that which is believed, body of faith/belief/teaching (Diod S 1, 23, 8 ἰσχυρὰν πίστιν καὶ ἀμετάθετον=an article of faith that was firm and unshakable [concerning Orpheus and Dionysus]; Mel., HE 4, 26, 13; Ath. 8, 1; Iren., 1, 10, 2 [Harv. πολιτάρχης, ου, ὁ [[politarchēs]] (on the form cp. πολίαρχος Mason 76f; found only in ins and pap, but Aeneas Tact. 26, 12 has a dialectical variant πολιταρχος) a magistrate who formed part of a town or city council, city official. πολυμερῶς [[polumerôs]] (μέρος) adv. (Diod S 5, 37, 2; Plut., Mor. 537d; several times in Vett. Val. [index III]; Jos., Ant. 12, 54) of πολυμερής, ἐς (Aristot.; Plut., Mor. 427b; 757d; PGM 13, 304; Wsd 7:22; Ar. 13, 5 body consists of 'of many parts'; Tat. 15, 1 the soul is composite; s. also Porph., Sent. 34) of prophetic writing, in various parts w. πολυτρόπως='in various ways' (the two words together also Maximus Tyr. 1, 2b; 11, 7a) Hb 1:1 (on the alliteration cp. the beginning of Philo, περὶ μετανοίας; for extreme fondness of π sounds s. e.g. Gorgias 11, 11). Many render in many ways (L-S-J-M cite Plut., Mor. 537d in support, but this pass. refers to the numerous aspects of Thersites' deformed body, whose various parts are described in Il. 2, 217–19) so NRSV: 'in many and various ways'. If 'many ways' in such rendering refers to a variety of Scripture passages, the translators have the support of the Vulgate: multifariam. But to avoid a suggestion of banality, it is best to render along the line suggested above. Also, the rhetorical structure of Hb requires some preparation in the prol. for the numerous reff. to the OT.—DELG s.v. μέρομαι II. M-M.

Πόντος, ου, ὁ [[Póntos]] (Aeschyl., Hdt. et al.; ins; Philo, Deus Imm. 174; Joseph.; Just., A I, 58, 1) Pontus, orig. the name of a sea (the Euxine, or Black Sea), then the designation of an empire founded by the Achaemenid Persians in northeast Asia Minor, extending fr. the Black Sea to the Caucasus. After Pompey's conquest a part of it was made a Roman province. Acc. to Appian, Mithrid. 15 §53 many Ἕλληνες had settled there. AWalde, Latein. etymolog. Wörterbuch² 1910 s.v. poplicus; B-D-F §41, 2; cp. Mlt-H. 155). Ac 28:7f mentions a Π. as πρῶτος τῆς νήσου for the island of Malta. The title is also attested elsewh. for Malta: IG XIV, 601 [=IGR I, 512] Λ. Κα[στρί] κιος Κυρ(εῖνα) Προῦδηνς ἱππεὺς Ῥωμ(αίων), πρῶτος Μελιταίων καὶ πάτρων, ἄρξας καὶ ἀμφοπολεύσας θεῷ Αὐγούστῳ; CIL X, 7495 [munic]ipi Mel(itensium) primus omnium (but s. Bruce, Acts 532f on this ins). As a rule it is taken for granted that it was a designation for the highest Roman official on the island (Holtzmann, Wendt, Bruce et al.). It has also been thought to refer to any office that was non-Roman in origin (AMayr, Die Insel Malta im Altertum 1909, 116; AWikenhauser, Die AG 1921, 345f; Beginn. IV 342; s. The pl. is a strong indication that this transl.

is correct; but the pl. may be thought of as parallel to vs. 8 ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτοῦ, so that we cannot finally exclude the sense 2 way of life, conduct (Pr 2:7.—Of the ‘way’ that one should take: Socrat., Ep. 27, 5) Hs 5, 6, 6. κατευθύνοντες τὴν πορείαν αὐτῶν ἐν ὁσιότητι 1 Cl 48:4. In the course of its history (sketched by MDibelius, exc. on Phil 1:13) the word also came to designate the governor's official residence (IG XIV, 2548 τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ πραιτωρίου; SIG 880, 63; BGU 288, 14; POxy 471, 110). This is the mng. of the word in the gospels Mt 27:27; Mk 15:16; J 18:28ab, 33; 19:9. But it is a matter of dispute whether it refers to the palace of Herod in the western part of the city (Schürer I 361 w. reff. to Jos., Bell. 2, 14, 8; 15, 5 and Philo, Leg. 38; REckardt, Das Praetorium des Pilatus: ZDPV 34, 1911, 39–48; Dalman, Orte³ 355–63 [Eng. tr. 335–45]; JBlinzler, Der Prozess Jesu³, '60, 183–86; PBenoit, RB 59, '52, 531–50, HTR 64, 71, 135–67; RMackowski; Jerusalem, City of Jesus '80, 102–11; JMurphy-O'Connor, The Holy Land, rev. ed. Of a palace of Herod GJs 21:2 (codd.). In Caesarea, at any rate, the palace of Herod served as the 'praetorium'. Paul was imprisoned ἐν τῷ πραιτωρίῳ τοῦ Ἡρώδου Ac 23:35. ELohmeyer (Phil 1930, 3; 40f) places Phil 1:13 here; this conclusion is variously regarded, depending on one's conception of the place where Paul was imprisoned. If the letter was written fr. Rome, the words ἐν ὅλῳ τῷ πραιτωρίῳ are best taken to mean in the whole praetorian (or imperial) guard (EHaupt, PEwald, et al.). If it belongs to a non-Roman imprisonment, τὸ πραιτώριον beside οἱ λοιποὶ includes those who live in the governor's palace (s. PFeine [s.v. The same double mng. is found for πρεσβύτεροι in 1 Cl 1:3 beside νέοι, while in 3:3; 21:6, beside the same word, the concept of being old is the dominant one (as Jos., C. Ap. 2, 206). On the disputed pass. But in any case it is meant to indicate a position of great dignity the elder.—HWindisch, exc. on 3J, end; ESchwartz, Über den Tod der Söhne Zebedaei 1904, 47; 51; HWendt, ZNW 23, 1924, 19; EKäsemann, ZTK 48, '51, 292–311; DWatson, NTS 35, '89, 104–30, rhetorical analysis of 2J.—ὁ πρ. and οἱ πρ. are mentioned by Papias in these much-discussed passages: 2:3, 4, 5, 7, 14, 15. For some of the lit. s. the note on JKleist's transl. '48, p. 207 n. 18. γ In Rv there are 24 elders sitting on thrones about the throne of God; they form a heavenly council of elders (cp. Is 24:23) 4:4, 10; 5:5–14; 7:11, 13; 11:16; 14:3; 19:4. The elders have been understood as glorified human beings of some kind or astral deities (or angels) (for the var. views s. RCharles, ICC Rv I 128–33; JMichl, D. 24 Ältesten in d. Apk. d. hl. J. '38); the number 24 has been referred to the following: the 24 priestly classes of the Jews (1 Ch 24:7–18; Jos., Ant. 7, 365–67) whose heads were called 'elders' (Yoma 1, 5; Tamid 1, 1; Middoth 1, 8); the 24 stars which, according to Babylonian belief, stood half on the north and half on the south of the zodiac (Diod S 2, 31, 4; POsl 4, 19; HGunkel, Z. religionsgesch. Verständnis des NT 1903, 42f; Boll 35f); the 24 hours of the day, represented as old men w. shining garments and w. crowns (acc. to the Test. of Adam [ed. CBezold, TNöldeke Festschr. 1906, 893–912]; JWellhausen, Analyse der Offb. Joh. 1907, p. 9, 1; NMorosof, Offb. Joh. 1912, 32); the 24 Yazatas in the state of the gods in heaven, acc. to Persian thought (Bousset). It is certainly an open question whether, or how far, the writer of Rv had any of these things in mind.—On the presbyters, and esp. on the question how ἐπίσκοπος and πρεσβύτερος were originally related to each other (a question which is raised particularly in the pastorals; cp. προεπιλακτίζω [[proepilaktízō]] 1 aor. mid. προεπελακτισάμην. The word προεπελακτίσασθε='you have forced me' Pol 3:1 is Zahn's restoration of the text on the basis of four different Gk. readings that are alike in that they yield no sense. Until now the word is not attested lexically; neither is ἐπιλακτίζειν nor προλακτίζειν. The form προεπεκαλέσασθε, preferred by Lghtf., Funk, Hilgenfeld, Krüger, Bihlmeyer means 'you have invited' or 'requested' but it has no more lexical attestation than Zahn's conjecture. Conversely, ἐπικαλεῖν and προκαλεῖν were in current use and the 'provocastis' of the Latin version seems to presuppose it.—DELG s.v. λαξ.

προέρχομαι [[proérchomai]] mid. dep.; impf. προηρχόμην; fut. προελεύσομαι; 2 aor. προήλθον; pf. 3 sg. προελήλυθεν (Just.) W. indication of the goal: ἃ προητοίμασεν εἰς δόξαν Ro 9:23. οἷς (by attraction for ἃ) προητοίμασεν ὁ θεὸς ἵνα Eph 2:10. The martyr's self-description is that of a sacrifice prepared by God acc. to God's good pleasure. In this sense the context fills out the expr. καθὼς προητοίμασας MPol 14:2.—IEph 9:1 cj. Lightf.—Mid. prepare oneself w. μετανοεῖν Hv 4, 2, 5.—DELG s.v. ἐτοῖμος. TW.

προεὐαγγελίζομαι [proeuangelízomai] 1 aor. προεὐαγγελισάμην proclaim good news in advance (schol. on Soph., Trach. 335 p. 299 Papag.; Philo, Op. M. 34, Mut. Nom. 158) τινί to someone, foll. by direct discourse introduced by ὅτι Gal 3:8.—DELG s.v. ἄγγελος. M-M. TW.

προέχω [proéchō] aor. ptc. προσχών TestSol (Hom. et al.; pap; Job 27:6 v.l. [s. Swete], προσέχων in text; En; TestSol 5:3; Just., D. 2, 6; Tat.; Ath. 7, 2) 1 to be in a prominent position, jut out, excel, be first (Jos., C. Ap. 2, 186) w. gen. of the thing that is exceeded (Memnon [I b.c. / I a.d.]: 434 Fgm. 1, 34, 7 Jac.; Cebes 34, 1; Dio Chrys. 44 [61], 11; Ael. Aristid. 30 p. 581 D.; EpArist 235; Tat. 15, 3; T. Kellis 22, 28f; w. acc. Ath. 7, 2) πάντων προέχουσα ἐπιθυμία above all there is (the) desire Hm 12, 2, 1.—Much is to be said for taking προεχόμεθα Ro 3:9 as a pass., meaning are we excelled? i.e. are we in a worse position (than they)? or have we lost our advantage? (s. Field, Notes 152f; Goodsp.; NRSV mg.; cp. Plut., Mor. 1038d οὐθὲν πρ. ὑπὸ τοῦ Διὸς of the philosopher whose majesty is not excelled by that of Zeus. A link with vs. 1 is suggested by the v.l. προκατέχομεν περρισόν; s. προκατέχω; FDanker, Gingrich Festschr. 100f). S. 2. 2 In Ro 3:9, which is text-critically uncertain (s. 1), the mid. either has the same mng. as the act. (the act. is so used in X., Cyr. 2, 1, 16; Jos., Ant. 7, 237) have an advantage (Vulgate)—a mng. not found elsewh. for the mid.—or its customary sense hold someth. before oneself for protection (so also En 99:3). In that case, if the 'we' in προεχόμεθα refers to Judeans, the οὐ πάντως that follows vigorously rejects the idea that they possess anything that might shield them fr. God's wrath. But if the 'we' in ga must of necessity be the same as in 9b, i.e. Paul himself, he is still dealing w. the opponents whom he has in mind in vss. 7, 8, and he asks ironically: am I protecting myself? am I making excuses? He is able to answer this question w. a flat no, since his explanation in vs. 9b is no less clear and decisive than his earlier statements (for προέχεσθαι='put up as a defense' cp. Soph., Ant. 80; Thu. 1, 140, 4).—M-M. TW.

προηγέομαι [proēgéomai] mid. dep.; fut. προηγέσομαι (Hdt., Aristoph. et al.; ins, pap, LXX; TestJob 43:14; 52:12; ApcMos 38 [w. dat.]; Philo, Op. M. 28) 1 to go first and lead the way, go before and show the way τινός (to) someone (X., Hipparch. 5, 4; 2 Macc 11:8) in vivid imagery of righteousness that goes before the good man to judgment B 4:12. 2 to be in a position of leadership, preside (SIG 1109, 87; PLips 63, 6) οἱ προηγούμενοι the officials (cp. Dt 20:9; 1 Esdr 5:8f; 9:12 [τοῦ πλήθους]) of the Christian congregations 1 Cl 21:6. More definitely οἱ πρ. τῆς ἐκκλησίας Hv 2, 2, 6. W. πρωτοκαθεδρῖται 3, 9, 7. 3 The difficult passage τῇ τιμῇ ἀλλήλους προηγούμενοι Ro 12:10 is understood by the versions (It., Vulg., Syr., Armen.) to mean try to outdo one another in showing respect. Others make an association w. ἡγεῖσθαι=consider, esteem and prefer the sense consider better, esteem more highly for προηγ.: as far as honor is concerned, let each one esteem the other more highly (than oneself); cp. Kaibel 716, 5 φίλους ὑπὲρ ἑαυτὸν ἐτίμα=he valued his friends above himself; s. B-D-F §150.—M-M. TW.

πρόθεσις, εὖς, ἡ [próthesis] (προτίθημι) 1 setting forth of someth. in public, setting forth, putting out, presentation (Pla. et al.; ins; Sb 5252 [pap. of 65 a.d. regarding the farming out of the fees fr. a temple of Isis; ln. 19 φαγεῖν ἐκθέτου οὔσης τῆς προθέσεως]. Ex 25:23–30; Lev 24:6) Hb 9:2. Some exegetes here take πρ. in the abstract sense = presentation of the showbread. 2 that which is planned in advance, plan, purpose, resolve, will (Aristot. et al.; Polyb. 1, 26, 1 and oft.; Plut., Mor. 960f; ins, pap; 2 and 3 Macc; EpArist, Philo; Jos., Ant. 18, 272; 19, 190). A of humans 2 Ti 3:10 (here perh. w. a turn toward the mng. way of thinking; cp. Esp. used among Jews, this word is nearly always equivalent to συναγωγή in the sense of a cultic place (s. συναγωγή 2a; SKrauss, Pauly-W. 2 ser. IV, '32, 1287f; ins New Docs 3, 121f; 4, 201f). But many consider that the πρ. in Ac 16:13, 16 was not a regular synagogue because it was attended only by women (vs. 13), and because the word συν. is freq. used elsewh. in Ac (e.g. 17:1, 10, 17); the πρ. in our passage may have been an informal meeting place, perh. in the open air (s. The sing. is found Kaibel 560, 3 [I a.d.]; Jos., Vi. 37; Proclus, Theol. 98 p. 88, 24) περὶ πρωτεῖων for the first places, about preeminence Hs 8, 7, 4; 6. πρωτεύω [[prōteuō] (cp. πρωτεῖος; Pla., X. et al.; ins, incl. IMagnSip [IK VIII, 32, 3f]; pap, LXX; Ath., R. 24 p. 78, 4) to hold the highest rank in a group, be first, have first place ἵνα γένηται ἐν πάσιν αὐτὸς πρωτεύων that he might come to have first place in everything Col 1:18 (ἐν πάσιν like Plut., Mor. 9b. The pres. ptc. like PLips 40 II, 16; POxy 1983, 3; 2 Macc 6:18; 13:15; EpArist 275; Jos., Ant. 9, 167; 20, 182).—New Docs 2, 96; 4, 172. DELG s.v. πρώτος. M-M. TW.

πρωτοκαθεδρία, ας, ἡ [[prōtokathedría] (πρῶτος, καθέδρα; schol. on Eur., Orest. 93; Theophanes Conf. 163, 26 de Boor; cp. προεδρία of seats reserved for pers. in recognition of their public service, s. Reader, Polemo 285f) a position or place indicative of special honor for the pers. occupying it, seat of honor, best seat desired by Pharisees in the synagogue Mt 23:6; Mk 12:39; Lk 11:43; 20:46. Likew. by a false prophet θέλει πρωτοκαθεδρίαν ἔχειν Hm 11:12.—DELG s.v. ἔζομαι. TW.

πρωτοκαθεδρίτης, ου, ὁ [[prōtokathedrítēs] (s. prec. entry; only in Christian writers) one who occupies a seat of honor (w. οἱ προηγούμενοι) of congregation leaders Hv 3, 9, 7 (Leutzsch, Hermas 424 n. 420).

πρωτοκλισία, ας, ἡ [[prōtoklisía]] (ins fr. Delos [II b.c.]: JHS 54, '34, 142; Suda) the place of honor at a dinner, beside the master of the house or the host Mt 23:6; Mk 12:39; Lk 14:7f; 20:46.—DELG s.v. κλίνω. M-M. TW.

πρωτόμαρτυς, υρος, ὁ [[prōtómartus]] of one especially distinguished for testimony to the death, first martyr, of Stephen Ac 22:20 v.l. (cp. Πράξεις Παύλου Aa I 235 v.l. in the fem. form of Thecla, whose prestige is indicated by the descriptive terms ἀποστολός and ἱσαπόστολος in the ms. tradition; the mss. vary, some qualifying πρ. with ἐν γυναιξί).—Late pap: New Docs 2, 152.

πρώτος, η, ον [[prōtos]] (Hom.+; loanw. in rabb.). 1 pert. to being first in a sequence, inclusive of time, set (number), or space, first of several, but also when only two persons or things are involved (= πρότερος; exx. in Hdb. on J 1:15; Rdm.² 71f; Thackeray 183; s. also Mlt. 79; 245; B-D-F §62; Rob. 516; 662; and s. Most Eng. translations render π. with 'colt', and it is difficult to determine what kind of animal is meant in their versions of Mk and Luke, inasmuch as, similar to Greek usage, 'colt', when unqualified, is ordinarily associated with a young male horse, although such popular limitation was not the case in earlier stages of the Eng. language: s. ῥακά [[rhaká]] (also written ῥαχά; so as an uncomplimentary, perh. foul epithet in a Zenon pap of 257 b.c.: Sb 7638, 7 Ἀντίοχον τὸν ῥαχάν [s. on this Colwell, JBL 53, '34, 351–54; Goodsp, Probs. 20–23; MSmith, JBL 64, 1945, 502f]) a term of abuse/put-down relating to lack of intelligence, numskull, fool (in effect verbal bullying) Mt 5:22, a term of abuse, as a rule derived fr. the Aramaic ריקא or ריקה 'empty one', found (Billerb. I 278f) in the Talmud (EKautzsch, Gramm. des Biblisch-Aramäischen 1884, 10; Dalman, Gramm.² 173f; SFeigin, JNES 2, '43, 195f; Mlt-H. 152 w. note 3), empty-head. Doubt as to the correctness of this derivation is expressed by Wlh. and Zahn ad loc.; FSchulthess, ZNW 21, 1922, 241–43. Among the ancient interpreters, the Gk. Onomastica, Jerome, Hilary, and the Opus Imperfectum p. 62 (MPG LVI, 690) take ῥ. as = κενός=Lat. vacuus=empty-head, numskull, fool. Chrysostom says (MPG LVII, 248): τὸ δὲ ῥακά οὐ μεγάλης ἐστὶν ὕβρεως ῥήμα ... ἀντὶ τοῦ σύ=' ῥ. is not an expression denoting a strong put-down ... but is used in place of σύ.' The same thing in somewhat different words in Basilus, Regulae 51 p. 432c: τί ἐστὶ ῥακά; ἐπιχώριον ῥήμα ἡπιωτέρας ὕβρεως, πρὸς τοὺς οἰκειότερους λαμβανόμενον 'what is the mng. of ῥ.? It is a colloquial term of rather gentle cheek and generally used in familiar surroundings'. Sim., Hecataeus: 264 Fgm. 4 p. 13, 21f Jac. σαίνω [[sainō]] (Hom. et al.) ① prim., of dogs, 'wag the tail' (Hom. et al.), hence to try to win favor by an ingratiating manner, fawn upon, flatter (so Trag. et al.; Antig. Car. 172 σαίνειν φιλοφρόνως; Jos., Bell. 6, 336). It is in this direction that many prefer to take the mng. of the pass. in the only place in our lit. where the word occurs, 1 Th 3:3 τὸ μηδένα σαίνεσθαι (ἐν ταῖς θλίψεσιν ταύταις) so that no one might be deceived (PSchmidt, Schmiedel, Wohlenberg, GMilligan, CWilliams, Frame ad loc., also Zahn, Einl.³ I 158f). It is prob. that the misfortunes of the new converts would provide opportunity for Paul's opponents to show them exceptional kindness and so perh. beguile them into adopting their own views. Others, following the ancient versions and the Gk. interpreters prefer to understand ζ. in the sense ② to cause to be emotionally upset, move, disturb, agitate (Soph., Ant. 1214 παιδός με σαίνει φθόγγος; Diog. L. 8, 41 οἱ σαινόμενοι τοῖς λεγομένοις ἐδάκρυον.—In Stoic. III 231, 8f σαίνεσθαι is = 'be carried away w. someth.'), so that no one might be shaken or disturbed (Bornemann, vDobschütz [p. 133f n. 3 the material necessary for understanding the word is brought together], MDibelius, Steinmann, Oepke ad loc., NRSV; HChadwick, JTS n.s. 1, '50, 156ff). Σιλᾶς, α [Silās] or Σίλας, ἁ (still other spellings are attested for the NT; s. B-D-F §53, 2; 125, 2), ὁ (several times in Joseph. as a Semitic name; OGI 604, 4; IGR III 817, 1. Evidently=ܣܠܝܬܐ, the Aram. form [in Palmyrene inscriptions]

of Σαῦλ Saul) Silas. This name, which occurs only in Ac, is borne by a respected member of the church at Jerusalem who was prophetically gifted 15:22, 27; he was sent to Antioch and stayed there vss. 32, 33 [34] v.l.; later he accompanied Paul on his so-called second missionary journey 15:40–18:5 (mentioned nine times). Despite CWeizsäcker, Das apost. Zeitalter² 1892, 247 et al., incl. LRademaker, ZNW 25, 1926, 295, it is hardly to be doubted that this Silas is the same pers. as the Σιλουανός who is mentioned in Paul and 1 Pt. See the next entry and s. σκηνοποιός, οὔ, ὁ [skēnopoiós] 1 maker of stage properties (acc. to Pollux 7, 189 the Old Comedy used the word as a synonym for μηχανοποιός= either a 'stagehand' who moved stage properties [as Aristoph., Pax 174] or a 'manufacturer of stage properties'. Associated terms include σκηνογράφος Diog. L. 2, 125 and σκηνογραφία Arist., Poet. 1449a and Polyb. 12, 28a, 1, in ref. to painting of stage scenery) Ac 18:3. But if one understands σκηνή not as 'scene' but as 'tent' and considers it improbable that Prisca, Aquila, and Paul would have practiced such a trade in the face of alleged religious objections (s. Schürer II 54–55 on Jewish attitudes towards theatrical productions), one would follow the traditional rendering 2 tentmaker. This interpretation has long enjoyed favor (s. Lampe s.v.; REB, NRSV; Hemer, Acts 119, 233), but several considerations militate against it. The term σκηνοποιός is not used outside the Bible (and its influence), except for Pollux (above) and Herm. Wr. 516, 10f=Stob. I, 463, 7ff. There it appears as an adj. and in a figurative sense concerning production of a dwelling appropriate for the soul. The context therefore clearly indicates a structure as the primary component, but in the absence of such a qualifier in Ac 18:3 it is necessary to take account of words and expressions that similarly contain the terms σκηνή and ποιεῖν. A survey of usage indicates that σκηνή appears freq. as the obj. of ποιέω in the sense 'pitch' or 'erect a tent' (s. ποιέω 1a; act. σκηνοποιέω Is 13:20 Sym. οὐδὲ σκηνοποιήσει ἐκεῖ" Αραβ.; 22:15 Sym.; mid. σκηνοποιέομαι Aristot., Meteor. 348b, 35; Clearch., Fgm. 48 W.; Polyb. 14, 1, 7; Diod S 3, 27, 4; Ps.-Callisth. 2, 9, 8.—Cp. σκηνοποιῖα Aeneas Tact. 8, 3; Polyb. 6, 28, 3; ins, RevArch 3, '34, 40; and acc. to the text. trad. of Dt 31:10 as an alternate expr. for σκηνοπηγία.—Ex 26:1, it is granted, offers clear evidence of use of the non-compounded σκηνή + ποιέω in the sense 'produce' or 'manufacture [not pitch] a tent', but the context makes the meaning unmistakable; cp. Herodian 7, 2, 4 on the building of rude housing). Analogously σκηνοποιός would mean 'one who pitches or erects tents', linguistically a more probable option than that of 'tentmaker', but in the passages cited for σκηνοποιέω and σκηνοποιῖα components in the context (cp. the case for provision of housing in the Hermetic pass.) clearly point to the denotation 'pitching of tents', whereas Ac 18:3 lacks such a clear qualifier. Moreover, it is questionable whether residents of nomadic areas would depend on specialists to assist in such a common task (s. Mt 17:4 par. where a related kind of independent enterprise is mentioned).—That Prisca, Aquila, and Paul might have been engaged in the preparation of parts for the production of a tent is also improbable, since such tasks would have been left to their hired help. That they might have been responsible for putting a tent together out of various pieces is ruled out by the availability of the term σκηνογράφος (Ael., VH 2, 1 et al.; Bull. Inst. Arch. Bulg. 8, 69) in the sense of stitching together (the verb ἐπιτελεῖν Hb 8:5 does not support such a view, for it is not an alternate expr. for 'production' of a tent but denotes 'completion' of a project, connoting a strong sense of religious commitment; see. ἐπιτελέω 2) in which the component ῥαφ-provides an unmistakable qualifier.—In modern times more consideration has been given to identification of Paul's trade as 'leather-worker', an interpretation favored by numerous versions and patristic writings (s. Zahn, AG, ad loc.; L-S-J-M Suppl., s.v., as replacement for their earlier 'tentmaker'; Haenchen, ad loc., after JJeremias, ZNW 30, '31; Hock, s. below). As such he would make tents and other products from leather (Hock [s. below] 21). But this and other efforts at more precise definition, such as weaver of tent-cloth (a view no longer in fashion) may transmit reflections of awareness of local practice in lieu of semantic precision.—In the absence of any use of the term σκηνοποιός, beyond the pass. in Pollux and the Herm. Wr., and the lack of specific qualifiers in the text of Ac 18:3, one is left with the strong probability that Luke's publics in urban areas, where theatrical productions were in abundance, would think of σκηνοποιός in ref. to matters theatrical (s. 1). In addition, Ac 20:34; 1 Cor 4:12; 1 Th 2:9; 2 Th 3:8 indicate that Paul's work was of a technical nature and was carried out in metropolitan areas, where there would be large demand for such kind of work. What publics in other areas might understand is subject to greater question, for the evidence is primarily anecdotal.—JWeiss, Das Urchristentum 1917, 135; FGrosheide, Πάυλος σκηνοποιός: TSt 35, 1917, 241f; Zahn, AG II 632, 10; 634; Billerb. σπιλάς, ἄδος, ἡ [spilás] used metaph. in Jd 12. The interpretation depends on which of two possible mngs. is preferred: ① (s. DELG 1 σπῖλο) a rocky hazard hidden by waves, a rock washed by the sea, a (hidden) reef (Hom. et al.; Nicander, Alex. 290; Philostrate., Imag. 2, 13 p. 359, 19; Sb 6160, 1; Jos., Bell. 3, 420). Acc. to the Etymol. Magnum it is characteristic of the σπιλάδες that they cannot be seen, and hence a ship can be wrecked on them before any danger is suspected (αἱ ὑπὸ θάλασσαν κεκρυμμέναι πέτραι; Diod S 3, 44, 4 σπιλάδας ἐνθαλάττους). This type of interpr. is preferred by deWette, Mayor, Wordsworth, Chase, Weymouth, and conditionally by HvSoden, Windisch, REB 'danger', NRSV (mg. 'reefs'). In its favor is the sequence of unfavorable natural phenomena. ② (s. DELG 2 σπῖλο) that which soils or discolors, spot, stain (Orpheus, Lithica 614 GHermann=620 Ch-Éruelle [1898]: the agate is said to be κατὰστικτος σπιλάδεσσι='sprinkled w. spots'. An inscription on the cross indicated the reason for the execution J 19:19 (s. τίτλος).—WMichaelis, Zeichen, Siegel, Kreuz, TZ 12, '56, 505–25. B seeks to show in several passages that acc. to the scriptures it was necessary for the Messiah to die on the cross: 8:1 (the ξύλον that plays a part in connection w. the red heifer, Num 19:6, is ὁ τύπος ὁ τοῦ σταυροῦ); 9:8 (in the case of the 318 servants of Abraham Gen 14:14 the number 300 [= T'] points to the cross; cp. Lucian, Jud. Voc. 12: the letter tau has the form of the σταυρός); 11:1, 8a (the ξύλον of Ps 1:3); 12:1 (scripture quot. of uncertain origin), 2. ② the cross, with focus on the fate of Jesus Christ, the cross. The cross of Christ is one of the most important elements in Christian cult and proclamation: w. death and resurrection IPHld 8:2 and other details of his life PtK 4 p. 15, 33. For Judeans a σκάνδαλον Gal 5:11 (cp. Dt 21:23); cp. IEph 18:1. Hence an occasion for persecution Gal 6:12 (τῷ σταυρῷ because of the cross; dat. of cause, s. ἀπιστία 1). But it was for Paul his only reason for boasting vs. 14. ὁ λόγος ὁ τοῦ σταυροῦ the message of the cross 1 Cor 1:18, w. its mysterious, paradoxical character, is necessarily foolishness to unbelievers. For this reason any attempt to present this message in the form of worldly wisdom would rob the σταυρός τοῦ Χριστοῦ of its true content vs. 17. τὸ μαρτύριον τοῦ σταυροῦ is the testimony rendered by the Passion to the fact of Christ's bodily existence Pol 7:1 (cp. Just., D. 40, 3 πάθος τοῦ σταυροῦ).—Christ's death on the cross brings salvation Eph 2:16; Col 2:14. εἰρηνοποιεῖν διὰ τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ σταυροῦ αὐτοῦ make peace through the shedding of his blood on the cross 1:20 (s. W-S. §30, 12c; Rob. 226). Hence we may ἐπὶ τὸν σταυρόν ἐλπίζειν B 11:8b. Paul knows of baptized Christians whom he feels constrained to call ἐχθροὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ τοῦ Χριστοῦ because of their manner of life Phil 3:18. On the other hand Ign. speaks of blameless Christians ὥσπερ κατηλωμένους ἐν τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χρ. σαρκί τε καὶ πνεύματι as if nailed to the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ both in the flesh and in the spirit ISm 1:1 (cp. MartAndr Prius 1, 14 [Aa II/1, 54–55]). In the imagery of Ign. the cross is called ἡ μηχανή Ἰησοῦ Χρ. IEph 9:1 (s. HSchlier, Relgesch. Untersuchungen zu d. Ign.-briefen 1929, 110–24), and the orthodox believers are the κλάδοι τοῦ σταυροῦ branches of the cross ITr 11:2. Such passages provide a link with the transf. sense ③ the suffering/death which believers endure in συναλίζω [sunalízō] in the difficult passage συναλιζόμενος (συναλισκόμενος D) παρήγγειλεν αὐτοῖς Ac 1:4, the word is variously understood: 1 συναλίζω: to eat at the same table, with focus on fellowship, eat salt with, eat with (s. ἄλς) so the Lat., Syr., Copt. and the other ancient versions, Ephraem (AMerck, Der neuentdeckte Komm. des hl. Ephraem zur AG: ZKT 48, 1924, 228), Chrysost. (s. v.l. in a comment on Ps 140:4); PFeine, Eine vorkanonische Überl. des Lukas 1891, 160; AHilgenfeld, ZWT 38, 1895, 74; BWeiss, Blass, Preuschen; CBowen, ZNW 13, 1912, 247–59 (=Studies in the NT, ed. RHutcheon ’36, 89–109); Wendt, Zahn, Jacquier, JMoffatt; Goodsp., Probs. 122f; EGill, Rev. and Expos. 36, ’39, 197f ‘salt covenant’; OCullmann, Urchristentum u. Gottesdienst ’44, 15; EBishop, ET 56, ’44/45, 220; PBenoit, RB 56, ’49, 191 n. 3; EHaenchen, comm. ad loc. The objections to this point of view are that it fits rather poorly into the context, and also the circumstance that this mng., strictly speaking, is not found elsewh. (in Manetho, Apotel. 5, 339 and Ps.-Clem., Hom. p. 11, 12; 134, 19 Lag. it does not necessarily refer to table fellowship. Yet Libanius V 246, 13 F. ἄλων κοινωνεῖν = τραπέζης κ.); besides, Ac 10:41 appears to echo 1:4. 2 συναλίζω (σύν + ἀλίζω ‘gather’; s. L-S-J-M s.v. ἀλίζω [A]): to bring together in assembly, bring together, assemble, pass., intr. sense come together (both Hdt. et al.; the pass. also Petosiris, Fgm. 33, ln. 6 [Πετόσειρις as an ἀνὴρ παντοίαις τάξεσι θεῶν τε καὶ ἀγγέλων συναλισθεῖς] and Jos., Bell. 3, 429, the act. Ant. 8, 105) so Weizsäcker; WBrandt, Die evangel. Gesch. 1893 p. 371, 1; Field, Notes 110f (‘as he was assembling w. them’); HHoltzmann, Knopf; WHatch, JBL 30, 1911, 123–28; ASteinmann, OHoltzmann. The objections to this are the singular number (IHeikel, StKr 106, ’35, 315 proposes συναλιζόμενοις) and the pres. tense of συναλιζόμενος (a linguistic counterpart may perh. be found in the sing. pres. in Ocellus Luc. 15 πῶρ εἰς ἓν συνερχόμενον). 3 The difficulties in 1 and 2 have led some to resort to the expedient of finding in συναλιζόμενος simply another spelling of συναυλιζόμενος, which is actually the reading of several minuscules here (the same variation in X., Cyr. 1, 2, 15 and Ps.-Clem., Hom. p. 11, 12): συναυλίζομαι dep., lit. ‘spend the night with’, then also gener. to spend time with, be with, stay with (Babrius, Fab. 106, 6; Pr 22:24; Synes., Kingship 19 p. 21 d; Achmes 109, 18). Paul and Ign. designate certain Christians as their σύνδουλοι: Col 1:7; 4:7 (σύνδουλος ἐν κυρίῳ); IEph 2:1; IMg 2; IPHld 4; ISm 12:2 (in the last two passages there are no names mentioned; the 'assistants' [διάκονοι] are called ζ.). In Rv 6:11 σύνδουλος also has the sense 'fellow-Christian'. Since it is a truism that one can be a slave to only one master, such self-identification, far from being a declaration of mean servility, served notice that ultimate allegiance was owed to God or Christ alone. C In Rv the revealing angel calls himself the fellow-slave of the seer and his brothers 19:10; 22:9.—New Docs 2, 54. Schwyzler I 758, 760); 1 aor. pass. ptc. συσταθείς. The basic semantic component refers to coherence or being in a state of close relationship.

A. transitive, act., pass., and mid. 1 to bring together by gathering, unite, collect pass. of the water of the boundless sea συσταθέν εἰς τὰς συναγωγὰς collected in its gathering-places 1 Cl 20:6. 2 to bring together as friends or in a trusting relationship by commending/recommending, present, introduce/recommend someone to someone else (X., Pla.; PHamb 27, 3; PHib 65, 3; POxy 292, 6; PGiss 71, 4 al.; 1 Macc 12:43; 2 Macc 4:24; 9:25; Jos., Ant. 16, 85; Just., D. 2, 1 θεῶ) τινά τινι (re)commend someone to someone (PSI 589, 14 [III b.c.] σύστησόν με Σώσω; PBrem 5, 7 [117–19 a.d.]) ὑμῖν Φοίβην Ro 16:1 (in a letter, as Chion, Ep. 8 ὅπως αὐτὸν συστήσαιμί σοι). Self-commendation (ἐαυτὸν/ἐαυτοὺς ς.) may be construed either as inappropriate 2 Cor 3:1; οὐ πάλιν ἐαυτοὺς συνιστάνομεν ὑμῖν 5:12; 10:12 (ἐαυτοὺς), 18a (ἐαυτὸν); or as appropriate (ὡς θεοῦ διάκονοι) 6:4 (but s. 3 below). συνιστάνοντες ἐαυτοὺς πρὸς πᾶσαν συνείδησιν ἀνθρώπων we commend ourselves to every human conscience 4:2=to every person's awareness of what is right (s. πρὸς w. acc. 3εβ as PMich 210, 4 [c. 200 a.d.]). (The juxtaposition of apparently contradictory approaches to self-commendation is true to Gr-Rom. perspectives: contrast Pind., O. 9, 38f 'an untimely boast plays in tune with madness' and O. 1, 115f in which the poet celebrates his own power of song. The subject of appropriate and inappropriate self-commendation is discussed at length by Plut., Mor. 539–47 [On Inoffensive Self-Praise]. τινά someone ὁ ν ὁ κύριος συνίστησιν 10:18b. Pass. συνίστασθαι ὑπό τινος be recommended by someone (Epict. 3, 23, 22; PPetr II 2, 4, 4 [III b.c.]) 12:11. 3 to provide evidence of a personal characteristic or claim through action, demonstrate, show, bring out τὴν someh. (Polyb. 4, 5, 6 εὐνοίαν) Ro 3:5. Cp. 2 Cor 6:4 (see comm. and 2 above). συνίστησιν τὴν ἐαυτοῦ ἀγάπην εἰς ἡμᾶς ὁ θεός 5:8. Difficult and perh. due to a damaged text (B-D-F §197) is the constr. w. acc. and inf. (cp. Diod S 14, 45, 4) συνεστήσατε ἐαυτοὺς ἀγνοοῦς εἶναι τῷ πράγματι 2 Cor 7:11. W. a double acc. (Diod S 13, 91, 4; Sus 61 Theod.; Philo, Rer. Div. Her. 258 συνίστησιν αὐτὸν προφήτην [so in the mss.]; Jos., Ant. 7, 49) παραβάτην ἐμαυτὸν συνιστάνω I demonstrate that I am a wrongdoer Gal 2:18 (WMundle, ZNW 23, 1924, 152f). 4 to bring into existence in an organized manner, put together, constitute, establish, prepare, mid. τὴν someh. (Pla. et al.; Tat. 1, 2; pap) of God's creative activity (Lucian, Hermot. 20 Ἡφαιστος ἀνθρωπον συνεστήσατο; En 101:6; Philo, Leg. All. 3, 10 θεὸν τὸν τὰ ὅλα συστησάμενον ἐκ μὴ ὄντων; Jos., Ant. 12, 22 τὸν ἅπαντα συστησάμενον θεόν) ἐν λόγῳ συνεστήσατο τὰ πάντα 1 Cl 27:4 (Herm. Wr. 1, 31 ἅγιος εἶ, ὁ λόγῳ συστησάμενος τὰ ὄντα).

B. intransitive, in our lit. the pres. mid. and pf. act. 1 to stand in close association with, stand with/by (1 Km 17:26), perf. act. τινί someone Lk 9:32 (οἱ συνεστῶτες as Apollon. Paradox. 5). 2 to be composed or compounded of various parts, consist, pres. mid., ἔκ τινος of someth. (Pla., X. et al.; Herm. συσπαράσσω [susparássō] 1 aor. συνεσπάραξα (Maximus Tyr. 7, 5e ‘tear to pieces’) to agitate violently, pull about, convulse τινά someone, of a hostile spirit, who so treats the person who is in his power Mk 9:20; w. ῥήγνυμι Lk 9:42.

συσπάω [suspáō] (Pla. et al.; La 5:10) to draw together or retract so as to be no longer open and extended, draw together τὰς χεῖρας πρὸς τὸ δοῦναι clench one’s fists when it comes to giving (RKnopf D 4:5) or keep one’s hands closed (HWindisch B 19:9) B 19:9; D 4:5. But since this expr. is contrasted w. ἐκτείνειν τὰς χεῖρας (s. ἐκτείνω 1), it may be better to translate pull back, pull in, retract (cp. Lucian, Tim. 13 συσπ. τοὺς δακτύλους; Aristot., HA 2, 17 τ. γλώτταν; 5, 20 τὴν κεφαλὴν).

σύσσημον, ου, τό [sússēmon] (σῆμα; συν-Tdf.; since Menand. [Per. 792 S.=362 Kö], as Phryn. p. 418 Lob. explains in rejecting the word; Diod S, Strabo, Plut., LXX; loanw. in rabb.) ① an action or gesture previously agreed upon as a signal, signal, sign (freq. in military context of someth. raised up Aeneas Tact. 223; Diod. Sic. 11, 22, 1; 19, 30, 1; a gilded shield 20, 51, 1; a special piece of headware Strabo 6, 3, 3) ζ.=giving of a kiss to a potential victim Mk 14:44.—M-M. But our pass. focuses on corporate identity; s. Is 49:22).

σύσσωμος, ον [sússōmos] (σῶμα; only in Christian writers) belonging to the same body w. συγκληρονόμος, συμμέτοχος τῆς ἐπαγγελίας Eph 3:6.—EPreuschen, ZNW 1, 1900, 85f.—Cp. Frisk s.v. σῶμα. M-M. TW.

συστασιαστής, οὗ, ὁ [sustasiastēs] (σύστασις, fr. συνίστημι, but in the mid. mng. ‘stand together’ [as of a group conspiring] Jos., Ant. 14, 22) fellow-insurrectionist Mk 15:7 v.l.—Cp. DELG s.v. ἵστημι.

σύστασις, εως, ἡ [sústasis] (Eur., Hdt.+). All usage in our lit. is associated with usage of the mid. συνίσταμαι (s. prec. entry beg.). ① a group with common interests, gathering, union, association (Appian, Bell. Civ. 5, 132, §547 συστάσεις=gangs [of robbers]) αἱ συστάσεις αἱ ἀρχοντικαί (s. ἀρχοντικός and ἀρχων 1c) ITr 5:2. On the basis of this pass. and the Lat. version, θηρίων συστάσεις I Ro 5:3 can be taken to mean packs of wild beasts. But mng. 2 is also prob. here. ② a strenuous encounter with a hostile entity, encounter, struggle (Eur., Hdt. et al.; Diod S 4, 16, 2): struggles with wild beasts I Ro 5:3 (s. 1 above). ③ the basic way in which someth. is structured, structure, constitution, nature (Diod S 15, 32, 1; TestReub 2:4; Tat. 1, 1; 4, 1 al.; Ath. 19, 2 al.; Alex. Aphr., An. p. 3, 19 Br.; T. Kellis 22, 8; 33) τοῦ κόσμου (Cornutus 18 p. 32, 5; cp. Wsd 7:17) 1 Cl 60:1 τοῦ κόσμου σύστασιν (cp. Ath. 25, 3 τοῦ παντὸς κόσμου σύστασιν). The rendering permanence, duration has been suggested, but such interp. can only be derived from the qualifier ἀέναος, resulting in an inelegant pleonasm ‘eternal permanence’. DELG s.v. ἵστημι. σφραγίζω [sphragizō] 1 aor. ἐσφράγισα. Mid.: fut. 2 sg. σφραγίῃ Jer 39:44; 1 aor. ἐσφραγισάμην. Pass.: 1 aor. ἐσφραγίσθην; pf. ptc. ἐσφραγισμένος (s. next entry; Aeschyl. et al.; ins, pap, LXX, TestSol; TestJob 5:2; ParJer 3:10; ApcMos 42; Philo, Joseph.; Mel., P. 15, 97 al.) 1 to provide with a seal as a security measure, seal w. acc. of the obj. that is to be secured or fastened by the seal: of a stone, to prevent its being moved fr. position (Da 6:18=Jos., Ant. 10, 258) Mt 27:66 (but s. μετά A3b). Likew. GPt 9:34, where the words μνημεῖον ἐσφραγισμένον refer back to the sealing of the stone used to close the tomb (8:32f); cp. ApcMos 42 ὁ θεὸς ... ἐσφράγισεν τὸ μνημεῖον. In the case of a closed building, so that it cannot be opened (Bel 11; 14) τὰς κλείδας 1 Cl 43:3. A bundle of rods, that were not to be disturbed 43:2. Abs. ἐσφράγισεν ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ he sealed (the closed mouth of the abyss) over him Rv 20:3. 2 to close someth. up tight, seal up τὶ someth. in order to keep it secret (Solon in Stob., Flor. III p. 114, 8 H. τοὺς λόγους σιγῇ; Cleopatra 73 μυστήριον ἐσφραγισμένον; PTeht 413, 6; Job 14:17; 24:16; Da 9:24 Theod.; Da 12:9 LXX) Rv 10:4; 22:10. 3 to mark with a seal as a means of identification, mark, seal (Eur., Iph. T. 1372; Mel., P. 16, 104 al.; in pap, of all kinds of animals), so that the mark denoting ownership also carries w. it the protection of the owner (on the apotropaic aspect cp. TestSol 14:2): σφραγίσωμεν τοὺς δούλους τοῦ θεοῦ ἐπὶ τῶν μετώπων αὐτῶν Rv 7:3 (marking w. a seal on the forehead in the cult of Mithra: Tertullian, Praescr. Haer. 40). Corresp. ἐσφραγισμένοι vs. 4ab, 5, 8 (on the concept of sealing eschatologically cp. Ezk 9:4ff; Is 44:5; PsSol 15:6, 9; 4 Esdr 6:5f; 8:5iff. S. also LBrun, Übriggebliebene u. Märtyrer in Apk: StKr 102, 1930, 215–31). This forms a basis for understanding the imagery which speaks of those who enter the Christian community as being sealed with or by the Holy Spirit Eph 1:13; cp. 4:30. Sim. θεός, ὁ σφραγισάμενος ἡμᾶς καὶ δοὺς τὸν ἄρραβῶνα τοῦ πνεύματος ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμῶν 2 Cor 1:22; but here the context contributes an additional component in the sense of ‘endue with power from heaven’, as plainly in J 6:27 (cp. σφραγίς 4a); but EDinkler, OCullmann Festschr. ’62, 183–88 associates 2 Cor 1:22 w. baptism; s. σφραγίς 4b. 4 to certify that someth. is so, attest, certify, acknowledge, fig. (as a seal does on a document: pap; Jer 39:10f; Esth 8:8, 10.—Anth. Pal. 9, 236 ἐσφράγισαν ὅρκοι) w. ὅτι foll. J 3:33. 5 to seal someth. for delivery, seal σφραγισάμενος αὐτοῖς τὸν καρπὸν τοῦτον Ro 15:28 is perh. to be understood fr. the practice of sealing sacks of grain (Dssm., NB 65f [BS 238f]). But some have thought that the imagery is rather hard to maintain, since the ‘fruit’ must not only be sealed, but also forwarded to Jerusalem and delivered there. In any case the sense of the expr. is easier to understand in some such wording as this: when I have placed the sum that was collected safely (sealed) in their hands (s. LRadermacher, ZNW 32, ’33, 87–89; HBartsch, ZNW 63, ’72, 95–107). On the debate s. New Docs 2, 191, w. a late pap in further support of Dssm.’s view.—Straub 29f. DELG s.v. σφραγίς. M-M. TW.

Civ. 2, 22 §82; pap, LXX; Hippol., Ref. 9, 11, 5) σφραγίς θεοῦ Rv 7:2 (against power of demons, etc. RCharles, Comm. Σωσθένης, ους, ό [Sōsthēnēs] (Diod S, Diog. L.; Achilles Tat. 5, 17, 5 al.; ins, pap; on the termination-ης s. Mussies 77) Sosthenes 1 leader of a synagogue in Corinth at the time of Paul's first missionary work in that city. He was beaten in the presence of Gallio the proconsul Ac 18:17, but the account (18:12–17) does not say why. From Theodoret to Zahn many scholars, not without good reason, have identified him with the foll. 2 a 'brother' mentioned in the salutation 1 Cor 1:1, beside Paul himself. See also subscr. He is known to the Corinthians, but need not have been a Corinthian himself, unless he is to be identified w. 1.—LGPN I. M-M.

Σωσίπατρος, ου, ό [Sōsīpatros] (Athen.; ins, pap; 2 Macc 12:19, 24) Sosipater, designated as a συγγενής of Paul in Ro 16:21, where he also sends greetings to the church. He is freq. considered to be the same man as Sopater of Beroia (s. Σώπατρος), e.g. by Zahn, Ltzm. Linguistically this is prob.—LGPN I. M-M.

σωτήρ, ήρος, ό [sōtér] (σῶζω) one who rescues, savior, deliverer, preserver, as a title of divinities Pind., Aeschyl.+; ins, pap; TestSol 17:4. This was the epithet esp. of Asclepius, the god of healing (Ael. Aristid. 42, 4 K. ζ. τῶν ὄλων; OGI 332, 9 [138–133 b.c.], s. note 8; SIG 1112, 2; 1148); Celsus compares the cult of Ascl. w. the Christian worship of the Savior (Origen, C. Cels. 3, 3). Likew. divinities in the mystery religions, like Sarapis and Isis (Σαράπιδι Ἰσιδι Σωτήρσι: OGI 87; Sb 597 [both III b.c.]; Sb 169 [Ptolemaic times]; 596; CIG 4930b [I b.c.]), as well as Heracles (τῆς γῆς κ. τῶν ἀνθρώπων ζ.: Dio Chrys. 1, 84) or Zeus (Ael. Aristid. 52 p. 608 D.: Ζεὺς ό ζ.).—GANrich, Das antike Mysterienwesen 1894, 47ff; GWobbermin, Religionsgesch. Studien 1896, 105ff.—In gnostic speculation: ό ζ. = ό παράκλητος Iren. 1, 4, 5 (Harv. I, 38, 9). The LXX has σωτήρ as a term for God; so also ApcSed 13:6 p. 135, 29 Ja.; and so do Philo (s. MDibelius, Hdb., exc. on 2 Ti 1:10) and SibOr 1, 73; 3, 35; but ζ. is not so found in EpArist, Test12Patr, or Josephus (s. ASchlatter, Wie sprach Jos. von Gott? 1910, 66).—At an early date σωτήρ was used as a title of honor for deserving pers. (s. X., Hell. 4, 4, 6, Ages. 11, 13; Plut., Arat. 53, 4; Herodian 3, 12, 2.—Ps.-Lucian, Ocyp. 78 in an address to a physician [s. θεός 4a]; JosAs 25:6 [of Joseph]; the same phrase IXanthos p. 45 no. 23, 3f, of Marcus Agrippa [I b.c.]; Jos., Vi. 244; 259 Josephus as εὐεργέτης καί σωτήρ of Galilee), and in ins and pap we find it predicated of high-ranking officials and of persons in private life. This is never done in our lit. But outside our lit. it is applied to personalities who are active in the world's affairs, in order to remove them fr. the ranks of ordinary humankind and place them in a significantly higher position. For example, Epicurus is called σωτήρ by his followers (Philod.: pap, Herc. 346, 4, 19 ὑμνεῖν τὸν σωτήρα τὸν ἡμέτερον.—ARW 18, 1930, 392–95; CJensen, Ein neuer Brief Epikurs: GGAbh. III/5, '33, 80f). Of much greater import is the designation of the (deified) ruler as ζ. (Ptolemy I Soter [323–285 b.c.] Πτολεμαῖος καί Βερενίκη θεοὶ Σωτήρες: APF 5, 1913, 156, 1; see Sb 306 and oft. in later times, of Roman emperors as well [Philo, In Flacc. 74; 126, Leg. ad Gai. 22; cp. τελωνεῖον [[telōneion]] s. τελώνιον.

τελώνης, ου, ὁ [[telōnēs]] (τέλος, ὠνέομαι or the related noun ὠνή ‘buying, purchasing’; Aristoph., Aeschin. et al.; ins, pap, ostraca) tax-collector, revenue officer (cp. τέλος 5; Goodsp., Probs. 28; on the semantic range of τελώνη s. New Docs 5, 103; cp. J. Vergote, Eos 48, '56, 149–60, s. p. 149). The τελ. in the synoptics (the only part of our lit. where they are mentioned) are not the holders (Lat. publicani) of the ‘taxfarming’ contracts themselves, but subordinates (Lat. portitores) hired by them; the higher officials were usu. foreigners, but their underlings were, as a rule, taken fr. the native population. The prevailing system of tax collection afforded a collector many opportunities to exercise greed and unfairness. Hence tax collectors were particularly hated and despised as a class (s. these condemnatory judgments on the τελῶναι: Demochares [300 b.c.] 75 Fgm. 4 Jac. τελ. βάνασος; Xeno Com. A strict Israelite was further offended by the fact that tax-collectors had to maintain continual contact w. non-Israelites in the course of their work; this rendered an Israelite tax-collector ceremonially unclean. The prevailing attitude is expressed in these combinations: τελῶναι καὶ ἀμαρτωλοί (s. ἀμαρτωλός bβ) Mt 9:10f; 11:19; Mk 2:15, 16ab (RPesch, BRigaux Festschr., '70, 63–87; cp. Τιμόθεος, ου, ὁ [[Timótheos]] (freq. found Aristoph., X.+; ins, pap, LXX; Jos., Ant. 12, 329–44) voc. Τιμόθεε 1 Ti 1:18; 6:20. Timothy, a friend, traveling companion and co-worker of Paul. Ac 16:1ff tells us that he lived in Lycaonia, prob. in Lystra, and was born of a polytheistic father and a monotheistic mother (named Eunice acc. to 2 Ti 1:5). Paul had him circumcised (Ac 16:3) before taking him on one of his important journeys (2 Cor 1:19; Ac

17:14f; 18:5), and used him permanently as an associate (συνεργός Ro 16:21). He is named as the 'co-writer' of six letters (2 Cor 1:1; Phil 1:1; Col 1:1; 1 Th 1:1; 2 Th 1:1; Phlm 1). He was active in Thessalonica (1 Th 3:2, 6; s. the subscr. to 2 Th), Corinth (1 Cor 4:17; 16:10), and then again in Macedonia (Ac 19:22) as Paul's envoy. He also accompanied him on his last journey to Jerusalem (Ac 20:4). Later he shared Paul's imprisonment (cp. Phil 2:19 and also the introductions of the imprisonment epistles except Eph). In 1 and 2 Ti he is mentioned in the salutations (1 Ti 1:2; 2 Ti 1:2) and also 1 Ti 1:18; 6:20 (s. above, beg.); 2 Ti subscr. refers to him as overseer. Finally he appears once more in the NT, Hb 13:23. He is mentioned nowhere else in our lit.—AJülicher, RE XIX 1907, 781–88; FPözl, Die Mitarbeiter des Weltap. τροπή, ῆς, ῆ [[tropé]] (τρέπω; Hom. et al.) the process of turning, turn, turning, change (Pla., Plut. et al.; Jos. Ant. 10, 191; Just., D. 85, 5; Mel., P. 21, 147 ['reversal, destruction']; Ath. 22, 4). In our lit. the word occurs only in τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα. darkening caused by turning Js 1:17. The context (s. φῶς 2) suggests imagery based on association of τρ. with astral phenomena, such as the 'solstice' (Hom. et al.; SIG 1264, 5; PHib 27, 120; 210 [III b.c.] ἡλίου τροπή; PRyl 27; Sb 358, 6; Dt 33:14; Wsd 7:18) or more gener. of the 'movements' of heavenly bodies fr. one place in the heavens or fr. one constellation to another (Pla., Tim. 39d; Aristot., HA 5, 9; Sext. Emp., Math. 5, 11; Philo, Agr. 51; Ath. 22, 7; Heath, Aristarchus 33 n. 3). In case the text is in proper order (but s. comm. ad loc.; Goodsp., Probs. 189f; vv.ll. include τροπή ἀποσκιάσματος, τροπῆς ἀποσκιάσματος), the more general sense (movements) is to be preferred to the more specialized (solstice), and the term τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα (s. ἀποσκίασμα) means darkening that has its basis in change. That God, in contrast to all else, is unchangeable, was a truth often expressed in Hellenistic theol. (Herm. Wr. in Stob. I p. 277 Wachsm.=p. 432, 15 Sc. τί θεός; ἄτρεπτον ἀγαθόν. τί ἄνθρωπος; τρεπτόν κακόν; Philo, Leg. All. 2, 89 πάντα τὰ ἄλλα τρέπεται, μόνος αὐτὸς [= θεός] ἄτρεπτός ἐστι; 33, Deus Imm. 22, Poster. Τρύφαινα (q.v.) and hence is regarded by many (e.g. Lghtf., Phil p. 175, 7) as her sister.—LGPN I. M-M.

Τρωάς, ἁδος, ἡ [[Trōás]] (also Τρωάς) Troas, (the) Troad, actually fem. of the noun Τρώς and the adj. Τρώος; a city and region in the northwest corner of Asia Minor, near the site of ancient Troy. So since Hom. Hymns and Trag.; the Trag. connect it with γῆ, as does Hdt. 5, 26 ἐν τῇ Τρωάδι γῇ. But Hdt. also uses the word 5, 122, 2 without any addition of the region in general, and the same is true of X.; Diod S 14, 38, 2 τὰς ἐν τῇ Τρωάδι πόλεις; 14, 38, 3 several cities κατὰ τὴν Τρωάδα; 17, 7, 10; 17, 17, 6 (cp. ἡ Ἰνδικὴ Hdt. 3, 106, 2= Ἰνδικὴ χώρα 3, 98, 2). In a time when there were many cities named Ἀλεξάνδρεια the one located in the Troad was known as Ἀλεξάνδρεια [ἡ] Τρωάς=the Trojan Alexandria (Polyb. 5, 111, 3; Strabo 13, 1, 1 p. 581; OGI 441, 165f [81 b.c.]). This city, as well as the region around it, was occasionally called Τρωάς for short (Ath. 26, 2; Pauly-W. I 1396, 15f and 2d ser. VII/1, 383f).—In our lit. Τρωάς has the article in Paul in 2 Cor 2:12 (B-D-F §261, 4) and prob. means the region, which the apostle soon left (vs. 13) for Macedonia. Elsewhere the article is almost always omitted, as is usually the case w. place-names (B-D-F §261, 1). In Ac 20:6, the only exception, the use of the art. can be justified as a glance backward at the preceding verse, where T. almost certainly means the city. In vs. 6 ἡ T.=Troas, which was just mentioned.—The other passages are: Ac 16:8, 11; 2 Ti 4:13; IPHld 11:2; ISm 12:1 and its terminal subscription; IPol 8:1.—Pauly-W. VII 525–84; Kl. Among polytheists on the other hand, sons of the gods in a special sense [s. The term is found predom. in the gospels, where it occurs in the synoptics about 70 times (about half as oft. if parallels are excluded), and in J 12 times (s. EKlostermann, Hdb. exc. on Mk 8:31). In every case the title is applied by Jesus to himself. Nowhere within a saying or narrative about him is it found in an address to him: Mt 8:20; 9:6; 10:23; 11:19; 12:8, 32, 40; 13:37, 41; 16:13, 27f; 17:9, 12, 22; 18:10 [11] v.l.; 19:28; 20:18, 28; 24:27, 30, 37, 39, 44; 25:13 v.l., 31; 26:2, 24ab, 45, 64; Mk 2:10, 28; 8:31, 38; 9:9, 12, 31; 10:33, 45; 13:26; 14:21ab, 41, 62; Lk 5:24; 6:5, 22; 7:34; 9:22, 26, 44, 56 v.l., 58; 11:30; 12:8, 10, 40; 17:22, 24, 26, 30; 18:8, 31; 19:10; 21:27, 36; 22:22, 48, 69; 24:7.—John (FGrosheide, Υἱὸς τ. ἀνθρ. in het Evang. naar Joh.: TSt 35, 1917, 242–48; HDieckmann, D. Whether the component of fragility (suggested by OT usage in ref. to the brief span of human life and the ills to which it falls heir) or high status (suggested by traditions that appear dependent on Da 7:13, which refers to one 'like a human being'), or a blend of the two dominates a specific occurrence can be determined only by careful exegesis that in addition to extra-biblical traditions takes account of the total literary structure of the document in which it occurs. Much neglected in the discussion is the probability of prophetic association suggested by the form of address Ezk 2:1 al. (like the OT prophet [Ezk 3:4–11] Jesus encounters resistance).—On Israelite thought contemporary w. Jesus and alleged knowledge of a heavenly being looked upon as a 'Son of Man' or 'Man', who exercises Messianic functions such as judging the world (metaph., pictorial passages in En 46–48; 4 Esdr 13:3, 51f) s. ὑπέρακμος, ον [hupérakmos] (Soranus, Hesych., Suda) fr. ἀκμή=highest point or prime of a person's development (ἀκ. in this sense in Pla., Rep. 5, 460e; Philo, Leg. All. 1, 10) in our lit. only 1 Cor 7:36. Depending on one's understanding of this pass. (s. γαμίζω) the term may apply either to a woman or to a man. ① Understood temporally and as a status term applied to a woman: past one's prime, past marriageable age, past the bloom of youth (cp. Soranus p. 15, 8.—Diod S 32, 11, 1 speaks of the ἀκμή τῆς ἡλικίας of a woman and in 34 + 35 Fgm. 2, 39 uses ἀκμή of the youthful bloom of a παρθένος.—Lycon [III b.c.], Fgm. 27 Wehrli [in Diog. L. 5, 65], commiserates the father of a παρθένος who, because of the smallness of her dowry ἐκτρέχουσα [=goes beyond] τὸν ἀκμαῖον τῆς ἡλικίας καιρόν). So e.g. Tyndale, Phillips, KJV, Jerusalem Bible. ② Other interpreters focus on the ascensive force of ὑπέρ, 'exceedingly' (freq. found in compounds, as in ὑπέρκalos 'exceedingly beautiful' and related terms Pollux 3, 71). In our pass., then, ὑπέρακμος means at one's sexual peak and may be applied to a woman (so, apparently, L-S-J-M 'sexually well developed') or to a man (cp. Diod S 36, 2, 3 ὁ ἔρωσ of a man in love ἤκμαζεν and became irresistible), with strong passions (REB and NRSV 'if his passions are strong').—Cp. DELG s.v. ἀκ-p. 44. M-M.

reality. Conversely, ‘without faith things hoped for would have no reality’. HKöster (s. bibliog. 4 below) argues for this sense also in 3:14, but s. 2. Cp. the rendering ‘substance’ (e.g. KJV, REB). 2 a plan that one devises for action, plan, project, undertaking, endeavor (Diod. Sic 15, 70, 2; 16, 32, 3; 16, 82, 6; 17, 69, 7; Ezk 19:5) ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ in connection with this undertaking i.e. the collection for Jerusalem 2 Cor 9:4. The fact that meeting a financial obligation is the main theme (vss. 1–2) might well suggest association of ὑπ. with its use e.g. as a t.t. of expectation of rent due PTebt 61b, 194. To emphasize the importance of steadfast commitment to professed obligation (opp. καρδία πονηρὰ ἀπιστίας ἐν τῷ ἀποστήναι), the author of Hb 3:14 uses ὑπ. in a way that invites an addressee to draw on the semantic component of obligation familiar in commercial usage of the term (s. PTebt above), an association that is invited by use of μέτοχος, a standard term for a business partner (PHib 109, 3; PCairZen 176, 102 [both III b.c.]), μέχρι τέλους (s.v. τέλος 2bβ), and βέβαιος (s. M-M s.v.). S. Köster 1b above for focus of ὑπ. on ‘reality’.—Satirically, ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ ὑποστάσει τῆς καυχήσεως in this boasting project of mine 2 Cor 11:17. 3 The interp. situation, condition (Cicero, Ad Attic. 2, 3, 3 ὑπόστασιν nostram=our situation), also specif. frame of mind (Dio Cass. 49, 9; Themist., Or. 13 p. 178b; Jos., Ant. 18, 24 of determination in desperate circumstances; sim. Polyb. 6, 55, 2) has been suggested for some of the passages cited in 1 and 2 above: 2 Cor 9:4 (explained in a v.l. via the exegetical gen. καυχήσεως); 11:17; Hb 3:14 (s. Dörrie [bibliog. 4 below], p. 39; the frame of mind described in Hb 3:6). The sense ‘confidence’, ‘assurance’ (based on LXX [Ruth 1:12; Ps 38:8; Ezk 19:5], where it renders הַיָּקִי etc.) favored by Melancthon and Luther (also Tyndale, NRSV, but not KJV) for Hb 11:1 has enjoyed much favor but must be eliminated, since examples of it cannot be found (s. Dörrie and Köster [4 below]). More prob. for Hb 4:11 is 4 guarantee of ownership/entitlement, title deed (Sb 9086 III, 1–11 [104 a.d.]; Spicq III 423 n. 14; cp. M-M s.v.) ὑποτεταγμένως [hupotetagménōs] adv. fr. the pf. pass. ptc. of ὑποτάσσω submissively 1 Cl 37:2.

ὑποτίθημι [hupotíthēmi] fut. 2 sg. ὑποθήσεις Ex 26:12; 27:5; 1 aor. ὑπέθηκα; 2 aor. inf. ὑποθεῖναι; 2 aor. mid. impv. ὑπόθου (TestJob 23:7) (Hom. +). 1 act. to lay someth. down as expression of service, lay down τὶ someth. A in idiom lay down, risk τὸν τράχηλον (Lucian, Dem. 41 ὑπ. τὴν ψυχὴν ταῖς τῆς πατρίδος τύχαις; cp. Seneca, Ep. 47, 4; POxy 2722, 35 [commercial]) τὸν ἑαυτῶν τράχηλον ὑπέθηκαν they put their own necks at risk (in my behalf) or, in view of Paul's penchant for commercial imagery: mortgaged their own necks Ro 16:4. B differently (somewhat as TestIss 5:3 ὑπ. τὸν νῶτον) bow in submission 1 Cl 63:1 (see s.v. τράχηλος for this pass. and Ro 16:4). 2 mid. (Hom. et al.) aor. ὑπεθέμην (LXX) τινί τι to provide instruction, make known, teach someth. to someone (Pla., Hipp. Maj. 286b) ταῦτα ὑποτιθέμενος τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς 1 Ti 4:6. This sense appears to fit the context better than suggest or point out someth. to someone (Hom.; Hdt. 1, 90; Pla., Charm. 155d; pap) or enjoin, order someone (to do) someth. (Hdt. 4, 134; Philo, Poster. Cai. 12; Jos., Bell. 2, 137, Ant. 1, 76).—M-M. ὑποτρέχω [hupotrēchō] 2 aor. ὑπέδραμον (Hom. et al.; PTebt 24, 67 [117 b.c.]; Jos., Ant. 7, 31; 326 al.) run or sail under the lee of, nautical t.t. (Plut., Mor. 243e ὄρμοις 'run in'. Also 'moor under' ἄκραν Heliod. 8, 16; ἄκρα τινί Longus 3, 21) νησίον τι ὑπ. Ac 27:16.—M-M. ὑποτύπωσις, εὠς, ῥή [hupotýpōsis] (τυπόμαι 'be stamped/marked'; Diog. L. 9, 78; Sext. Emp., Pyrrh. 2, 79; Pollux 7, 128; Philo, Abr. 71) a pattern A as a model prototype 1 Ti 1:16 (as prime recipient of extraordinary mercy in view of his infamous past, Paul serves as a model for the certainty of availability of mercy to others). B as a basis for behavioral comparison standard 2 Ti 1:13 (Philod., Mus. p. 77 Kemke [1884] ἀρετῶν; Synes., Dio 1 p. 38 Petav. ὁ λόγος [Δίωνος] ὑποτύπωσις ἐστὶν εὐδαίμονος βίου). ὑπουργέω [hupourgēō] (ὑπουργός contr. form of ὑποεργός 'rendering service' [cp. ὑπουργία IMakedD 590, 4]) fut. 2 sg. ὑπουργήσεις (2 Km 9:10 Aq.) be helpful, assist (Aeschyl., Hdt. et al.; pap; TestDan 3, 4; Philo, Vi. Cont. 72; Jos., Ant. 3, 7) εἰς τι in or at someth. (Eunap., Vi. Soph. p. 108) MPol 13:1.—DELG s.v. ἔργον.

ὑποφέρω [hupophērō] fut. ὑποίσω; aor. ὑπήνεγκα, inf. ὑπενεγκεῖν (Jos., Ant. 8, 213; on the aorist forms s. B-D-F §81, 2), ὑπενέγκαι (Hs 7:6). (Hom.+) In our lit. as fig. ext. of 'bear or carry by being under' (s. example fr. X. in 2 below)

1 to bear up under trouble or difficulty, submit to, endure τί someth. (Hippocr., X., Pla. et al.; Sb 5238, 22 [12 a.d.]; LXX; Tat. 21, 1 τιμωρίαν) Hv 3, 1, 9ab; 3, 2, 1. διωγμούς 2 Ti 3:11. θλίψεις Hs 7:4–6. λύπας 1 Pt 2:19; cp. Hm 10, 2, 6. πόνους 1 Cl 5:4 (cp. Abs. 1 Cor 10:13. 2 to bear someth. for the benefit of another, bear, bring, effect τὶ someth. in imagery of one who is under a burden (as e.g. an armor-bearer who is under the arms that he carries X., Cyr. 4, 5, 57) τὸ αἷμα τοῦ χριστοῦ ... παντὶ τῷ κόσμῳ μετανοίας χάριν ὑπήνεγκεν the blood of Christ made the bounty of repentance available to all the world 1 Cl 7:4 (v.l. ἐπήνεγκεν). (Here the blood of C. is viewed as capable of bearing a monumental burden of χάρις that benefits the entire world. As Lightf. points out, Soph., El. 834; X., Hell. 4, 7, 2 are not pertinent in establishing the questionable sense 'proffer'; nor is Plut., Publ. 109 [23], of a torch extended in symbolic gesture at a bier.)—M-M.

ὑποχθόνιος, (ία), ιον [hupochthónios] (χθόνιος 'in or under the earth') under the earth (Hes. et al.; Posidon.: 87 Fgm. 47 Jac.) οἱ ὑποχθόνιοι the powers under the earth w. οἱ ἐπουράνιοι καὶ ἐπίγειοι (ἐπίγειος 1bβ) ITr 9:1.—DELG s.v. χθών.

ὑποχωρέω [hupochōrēō] 1 aor. ὑπεχώρησα (Hom.+; ins, pap, LXX; TestAbr B 4 p. 108, 25 [Stone p. 64] ἐκ τοῦ σώματος; TestJob 27:2 [w. dat.]; GrBar 13:1f [ὑπὸ τινων]; Just., D. 9, 2) 1 of persons (Hom. et al. in a military sense 'go back, retreat, withdraw', but also as Philo, Abr. 22 in a peaceful sense) to withdraw from a location, to go off, go away, retire, w. εἰς and acc. (Jos., Vi. 20; 246) εἰς πόλιν Lk 9:10. Used w. ἐν in the sense 'retire to a place and spend some time there' (cp. Kühner-G. I 541) ἦν ὑποχωρῶν ἐν ταῖς ἐρήμοις he would steal away to (the) lonely places 5:16.—Lk 20:20 v.l. 2 of things to move from a position, move away (Jos., Ant. 1, 91; 11, 240) of rolling movement ὁ λίθος ὑπεχώρησεν παρὰ μέρος GPT 9:37 corr. by Robinson (ἐπ'-cod., ἀπ'-Gebhardt, Blass; s. μέρος 1c, end).—DELG s.v. χώρα. ὑποψία, ας, ἡ [hupopsía] (ὑφοράω 'look at fr. below' cp. ὑποπτέω; Hdt. et al.; CGFP 257, 69; pap; 2 Macc 4:34; Philo) suspicion διὰ τὴν ὑποψίαν τὴν πρὸς τὴν γυναῖκα out of suspicion about his wife AcPl Ha 4, 9.—Frisk s.v. ὄπωπα; cp. DELG. p. 811.

ὑπωπιάζω [hupōpiázō] (on the v.l. ὑποπιάζειν s. W-S. §5, 19 note, end; Mlt-H. 75) ('strike under the eye, give a black eye to' Aristot., Rhet. 3, 11, 15, 1413a, 20; TestSol 2:4 D [ὑποπ.]; Plut., Mor. 921f; Diog. L. 6, 89) 1 to blacken an eye, give a black eye, strike in the face lit. τινά someone, of a woman who is driven to desperation and who the judge in the story thinks might in the end express herself physically ἵνα μὴ εἰς τέλος ἐρχομένη ὑπωπιάζῃ με so that she might not finally come and blacken my eye Lk 18:5. Hyperbole is stock-in-trade of popular storytelling. Some prefer to understand ὑπ. in this pass. in sense 2 to bring someone to submission by constant annoyance, wear down, fig. ext. of 1 (s. L-S-J-M s.v. II, NRSV, REB, et al.). In this interp. ὑπ. in Lk 18:5 has its meaning determined by εἰς τέλος. But in such case the denouement lacks punch, for the judge has already been worn down and wants nothing added to the κόπος that he has already endured. A more appropriate rendering for a fig. sense would be browbeat.—JDerrett, NTS 18, '71/72, 178–91 (esp. 189–91): a fig. expr. (common throughout Asia), blacken my face = slander, besmirch underlies ὑπ. here. 3 to put under strict discipline, punish, treat roughly, torment, also fig. (cp. Aristoph., Fgm. 541 πόλεις ὑπωπιασμέναι) 1 Cor 9:27 (of the apostle's self-imposed discipline. But the expr. is obviously taken fr. the language of prize-fighting vs. 26; on the virtue of self-control cp. X., Mem. 2, 1, 1; 5).—DELG s.v. ὄπωπα E. M-M. TW.

ὕσσωπος, ου, ἡ [hússōpos] and ὁ, also ὕσσωπον, τό (in wr. outside our lit. [Nicander: II b.c., Ther. 872; Alexiph. 603; Chaeremon 44, 6 al.; ins, pap] all three genders are quotable; for the LXX the masc. and fem. are certain; Philo, Vi. Cont. 73 excludes the neut. for that author; in Jos., Bell. 6, 201, Ant. 2, 312; 4, 80 the matter is not clear. In our lit. the neut. is certain only for Barnabas.—כִּזְזִית the hyssop (acc. to Zohary, Plants 96f = the Origanum Syriacum, not the European Hyssopus), a small bush w. blue flowers and highly aromatic leaves; used in purificatory sacrifices (Ex 12:22; Lev 14:4; Num 19:6, 18.—SIG 1218, 16 [V b.c.], where the word is beyond doubt correctly restored, the hyssop serves to purify a house in which a corpse had lain; Chaeremon also mentions its purifying power) Hb 9:19; 1 Cl 18:7 (Ps 50:9); B 8:1, 6.—In J 19:29 hyssop appears as a plant w. a long, firm stem or stalk, which creates some difficulty. The conjecture by JCamarius († 1574), ὕσσῳ (=javelin [s. ὑσσός]): ὕσσῳ is actually found in mss. 476 and 1242, both antedating the conjecture) προπεριθέντες, has been accepted by many (e.g. Dalman, Jesus 187; Lagrange, JBernard; Field, Notes 106–8; M-M.; Goodsp., Probs. 115f; Mft.; NEB; w. reserve, Bultmann). Against the rdg. ὕσσός (not accepted by Weymouth, NAB [the margin suggests probability of 'symbolic' usage], NRSV, REB [marginal ref. to 'javelin']; 20th Century 'hyssop-stalk') it has been urged (by WBauer et al.) that the purifying effect of the hyssop (used acc. to Ex 12:22 specif. at the Passover) is the most important consideration here.—ILöw, Die Flora der Juden II 1924, 72f; 84–101, on J 19:29 esp. 99–101; LFonck, Streifzüge durch die biblische Flora 1900, 109; EbNestle, Zum Ysop bei Johannes, Josephus u. Φίλιππος, ου, ὁ [[Philippos]] (freq. found in lit., ins, pap; occurring also in LXX and Joseph., Ath.) Philip ('Fond-of-horses') a common name in the Gr-Rom. world. In our lit.: ❶ the tetrarch, son of Herod the Great and Cleopatra of Jerusalem (s. Joseph., index Φίλιππος 6). He was tetrarch of Gaulanitis, Trachonitis, Auranitis, Batanea and Panias (so Joseph., if the indications he gives in var. passages may thus be brought together), and acc. to Lk 3:1, also Iturea (all small districts northeast of Palestine). He rebuilt Panias as Caesarea (Philippi) and Bethsaida as Julias. Joseph. praises his personality and administration (Ant. 18, 106f). He was married to Salome, the daughter of Herodias (s. Ἡρωδιάς and Σαλώμη, end). He died 33/34 a.d., whereupon his territory was joined to the Rom. province of Syria, though only for a short time. Mt 16:13; Mk 8:27. Some think that this Philip is erroneously implied Mt 14:3; Mk 6:17; Lk 3:19 v.l.; s. 2 below.—Schürer I 336–40. ❷ The Philip mentioned Mt 14:3 and Mk 6:17 is associated by some scholars with a half-brother of Herod Antipas (s. Ἡρωδιάς), but the identification is not otherwise attested. ❸ the apostle, one of the Twelve. In the lists of the Twelve (which is the only place where his name is mentioned in the synoptics and Ac), he is found in fifth place, after the two pairs of brothers Peter-Andrew, James-John Mt 10:3; Mk 3:18; Lk 6:14; Ac 1:13. He is given more prominence in J, where he is one of the first to be called, and comes fr. Bethsaida, the city of Simon and Andrew; cp. 1:43–46, 48; 6:5, 7; 12:21f; 14:8f. Φοῖνιξ, ικος, ὁ [[Phoînix]] ΠΙ a seaport mentioned Ac 27:12. Two sites merit attention. The Phoinix mentioned Strabo 10, 4, 3 (475) lying in the territory of Lappa, some distance to the east fr. On the protection offered to mariners by this harbor s. esp. Ogilvie, also Hemer, Acts 139 (lit.); but Warnecke discounts its value, given the size of the ship and the large number of crew and passengers (Ac 27:37), and favors 2 Phoinikous (Ptolemy, Geogr. 3, 15, 3; Pausan. 4, 34, 12) on the southern coast of the area known as Messenia (Od. 21:15). According to Warnecke 28f (but without supporting grammatical references), the phrase λιμὴν τῆς Κρήτης means 'a harbor for Crete' (=a harbor suitable for trade to and fro fr. Crete). Paul's anxiety would stem from awareness of the type of weather conditions that would put mariners in peril on a trip from Crete to Messenian Phoinikous (cp. Hom., Od. 3, 291–98).—HBalmer, D. 'amulet', (Dioscor., Mat. Med. 5, 154; Plut., Mor. 377b al.; OGI 90, 45; PGM 1, 275; 3, 97; 127; 4, 86; 660; 708; 1071; 2506; 2510; 2694; 2705; 13, 796), but this sense is only one component of a more complex semantic phenomenon, where the referent reflects the Aramaic ܦܠܬܪܝܢ, i.e. two black leather boxes containing scripture passages worn on the forehead and the left arm, in keeping with Mosaic instruction Ex 13:9, 16; Dt 6:8; 11:18, where the directives appear to be figurative. Discovery of such small boxes, some with compartments, at the caves of Murabbaat, further confirms literary evidence of the practice. In some circles the devices were viewed as amulets protecting against demonic influences, and this understanding is reflected in Goodspeed's rendering ('they wear wide Scripture texts as charms'), which avoids the ambiguous Eng. loanword 'phylacteries'.—Schürer II 479–81 (note 86 lit.; add YYadin, Tefillin fr. The constantly recurring attempts to solve this riddle are based somet. on the Gk., somet. on the Hebr. alphabet; they may yield a name taken fr. mythology (as early as Irenaeus 5, 30, 3 Εὐάνθας, Λαττεινος, Τειταν, and many others: GHeinrici, Griech.-byz. Gesprächsbücher 1911, p. 60, 3) or fr. history (e.g. Nero Caesar, Ulpian [Trajan] or Domitian [EStauffer, ConNeot 11, '47, 237–41], or Jesus in a heretical disguise, CCecchelli: GFunacoli Festschr. '55, 23–31), the numerical value of whose letters is 666. On the other hand, some prefer to treat the number 666 purely as a number; they suspect a symbolic mng. (GA van den Bergh van Eysinga, ZNW 13, 1912, 293–306, NThT 4, 1915, 62–66; ELohmeyer in Hdb. exc. on Rv 13:18). Further, cod. C and the Armenian version have the rdg. χις'=616, which is preferred by RSchütz (s. below) and EHirsch, Studien z. 4. Ev. '36, 167; it was known to Irenaeus (5, 30, 1), who rejected it. ψάλλω [[psállō]] fut. ψαλῶ (Aeschyl.+; ins, LXX; TestAbr A 20 p. 103, 26f [Stone p. 54]; TestJob 14:2, 4; Jos., Ant. 11, 67; 12, 349; Just.; Mel., P. 80, 588; Did.) in our lit., in accordance w. OT usage, to sing songs of praise, with or without instrumental accompaniment, sing, sing praise w. dat. of the one for whom the praise is intended τῷ ὀνόματί σου ψαλῶ Ro 15:9 (Ps 17:50). ψαλλῶ σοι B 6:16 (Ps 107:4). τῷ κυρίῳ Eph 5:19; in this pass. a second dat. is added τῇ καρδίᾳ ὑμῶν in or with your hearts; here ψ. is found with ᾄδω (as Ps 26:6; 32:3; 56:8), and the question arises whether a contrast betw. the two words is intended. The original mng. of ψ. was ‘pluck’, ‘play’ (a stringed instrument); this persisted at least to the time of Lucian (cp. Par. 17). In the LXX ψ. freq. means ‘sing’, whether to the accompaniment of an instrument (Ps 32:2, 97:5 al.) or not, as is usually the case (Ps 7:18; 9:12; 107:4 al.). This focus on singing continued until ψ. in Mod. Gk. means ‘sing’ exclusively; cp. ψάλτης=singer, chanter, w. no ref. to instrumental accompaniment. Although the NT does not voice opposition to instrumental music, in view of Christian resistance to mystery cults, as well as Pharisaic aversion to musical instruments in worship (s. EWerner, art. ‘Music’, IDB 3, 466–69), it is likely that some such sense as make melody is best understood in this Eph pass. Those who favor ‘play’ (e.g. L-S-JM; ASouter, Pocket Lexicon, 1920; JMoffatt, transl. 1913) may be relying too much on the earliest mng. of ψάλλω. ψ. τῷ πνεύματι and in contrast to that ψ. τῷ νοῖ sing praise in spiritual ecstasy and in full possession of one’s mental faculties 1 Cor 14:15. ψυχή, ἡς, ἡ [[psuchḗ] (Hom.+; 'life, soul') It is oft. impossible to draw hard and fast lines in the use of this multivalent word. Gen. it is used in ref. to dematerialized existence or being, but, apart fr. other data, the fact that ψ. is also a dog's name suggests that the primary component is not metaphysical, s. SLonsdale, Greece and Rome 26, '79, 146–59. Without ψ. a being, whether human or animal, consists merely of flesh and bones and without functioning capability. Speculations and views respecting the fortunes of ψ. and its relation to the body find varied expression in our lit.

1 life on earth in its animating aspect making bodily function possible

A (breath of) life, life-principle, soul, of animals (Galen, Protr. 13 p. 42, 27 John; Gen 9:4) Rv 8:9. As a rule of human beings (Gen 35:18; 3 Km 17:21; ApcEsdr 5:13 λαμβάνει τὴν ψυχὴν the fetus in its sixth month) Ac 20:10. When it leaves the body death occurs Lk 12:20 (cp. Jos., C. Ap. 1, 164; on the theme cp. Pind., I. 1, 67f). The soul is delivered up to death (the pass. in ref. to divine initiative), i.e. into a condition in which it no longer makes contact with the physical structure it inhabited 1 Cl 16:13 (Is 53:12), whereupon it leaves the realm of earth and lives on in Hades (Lucian, Dial. Mort. 17, 2; Jos., Ant. 6, 332) Ac 2:27 (Ps 15:10), 31 v.l. or some other place outside the earth Rv 6:9; 20:4; ApcPt 10:25 (GrBar 10:5 τὸ πεδίον ... οὐπερ ἔρχονται αἱ ψυχαὶ τῶν δικαίων; ApcEsdr 7:3 ἀπέρχεται εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν; Himerius, Or. 8 [23]: his consecrated son [παῖς ἱερός 7] Rufinus, when he dies, leaves his σῶμα to the death-daemon, while his ψυχή goes into οὐρανός, to live w. the gods 23).—B 5:13 (s. There is nothing more precious than ψυχὴ in this sense Mt 16:26b; Mk 8:37. It stands in contrast to σῶμα, in so far as that is σάρξ (cp. Ar. 15, 7 οὐ κατὰ σάρκα ... ἀλλὰ κατὰ ψυχὴν; Tat. 15, 1 οὔτε ... χωρὶς σώματος; Ath. 1, 4 τὰ σώματα καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς; SIG 383, 42 [I b.c.]) Dg 6:1–9. The believer's soul knows God 2 Cl 17:1. One Christian expresses the hope that all is well w. another's soul 3 J 2 (s. εὐδοδῶ). For the soul of the Christian is subject to temptations 1 Pt 2:11 and 2 Pt 2:14; longs for rest Mt 11:29 (ParJer 5:32 ὁ θεὸς ... ἡ ἀνάπαυσις τῶν ψυχῶν); and must be purified 1 Pt 1:22 (cp. Jer 6:16). The soul must be entrusted to God 1 Pt 4:19; cp. 1 Cl 27:1. Christ is its ποιμὴν καὶ ἐπίσκοπος (s. ἐπίσκοπος 1) 1 Pt 2:25; its ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ προστάτης 1 Cl 61:3; its σωτὴρ MPol 19:2. Apostles and congregational leaders are concerned about the souls of the believers 2 Cor 12:15; Hb 13:17. The Christian hope is called the anchor of the soul 6:19. Paul calls God as a witness against his soul; if he is lying, he will forfeit his salvation 2 Cor 1:23.—Also life of this same eternal kind κτήσεσθε τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν you will gain (real) life for yourselves Lk 21:19. E Since the soul is the center of both the earthly (1a) and the transcendent (2d) life, pers. can find themselves facing the question concerning the wish to ensure it for themselves: ὁ εἰς ἐάν θέλῃ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ σῶσαι, ἀπολέσει αὐτήν· ὁ εἰς δ' ἂν ἀπολέσει τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἔνεκεν ἐμοῦ, σώσει αὐτήν Mk 8:35. Cp. Mt 10:39; 16:25; Lk 9:24; 17:33; J 12:25. The contrast betw. τὴν ψυχὴν εὐρεῖν and ἀπολέσαι is found in Mt 10:39ab (s. HGrimme, BZ 23, '35, 263f); 16:25b; σῶσαι and ἀπολέσαι vs. 25a; Mk 8:35ab; Lk 9:24ab; περιποιήσασθαι, ζωογονήσαι and ἀπολέσαι 17:33; φιλεῖν and ἀπολλύναι J 12:25a; μισεῖν and φυλάσσειν vs. 25b. F On the combination of ψυχὴ and πνεῦμα in 1 Th 5:23; Hb 4:12 (Just., D. 6, 2; Tat. 15, 1 χρὴ ... ζευγύναι ... τὴν ψυχὴν τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ) s. πνεῦμα 3a, end.—A-JFestugière, L'idéal religieux des Grecs et l'Évangile '32, 212–17.—A unique combination is ... σμάτων, καὶ ψυχὰς ἀνθρώπων, slaves and human lives Rv 18:13 (cp. Ezk 27:13; on the syntax s. Mussies 98). G In var. Semitic languages the reflexive relationship is paraphrased with ܡܢܬܐ (Gr.-Rom. parallels in W-S. §22, 18b note 33); the corresp. use of ψυχὴ may be detected in certain passages in our lit., esp. in quotes. fr. the OT and in places where OT modes of expr. have had considerable influence (B-D-F §283, 4; W-S. §22, 18b; Mlt. 87; 105 n. 2; Rob. 689; KHuber, *Untersuchungen über d. ὥς [[hōs]] (Hom.+; loanw. in rabb.) relative adv. of the relative pron. ὅς. It is used as 1 a comparative particle, marking the manner in which someth. proceeds, as, like A corresponding to οὕτως=so, in such a way': σωθήσεται, οὕτως ὥς διὰ πυρός he will be saved, (but only) in such a way as (one, in an attempt to save oneself, must go) through fire (and therefore suffer fr. burns) 1 Cor 3:15. τὴν ἑαυτοῦ γυναῖκα οὕτως ἀγαπάτω ὥς ἑαυτόν Eph 5:33; cp. vs. 28. ἡμέρα κυρίου ὥς κλέπτῃς οὕτως ἔρχεται 1 Th 5:2. The word οὕτως can also be omitted ἀσφαλίσασθε ὥς οἴδατε make it as secure as you know how = as you can Mt 27:65. ὥς οὐκ οἶδεν αὐτός (in such a way) as he himself does not know = he himself does not know how, without his knowing (just) how Mk 4:27. ὥς ἀνῆκεν (in such a way) as is fitting Col 3:18. Cp. 4:4; Eph 6:20; Tit 1:5 (cp. Just., A I, 3, 1 ὥς πρέπον ἐστίν). ὥς πᾶσα γυνὴ γεννᾷ GJs 11:2; ὥς ἀπεκαλύφθη AcPlCor 1:8. B special uses α in ellipses (TestAbr A 12 p. 90, 22 [Stone p. 28] θρόνος ... ἐξαστράπτων ὥς πύρ; TestJob 20:3 χρήσασθαι ... ὥς ἐβούλετο; JosAs 12:7 πρὸς σέ κατέφυγον ὥς παιδίον ἐπὶ τὸν πατέρα) ἐλάλουν ὥς νήπιος I used to speak as a child (is accustomed to speak) 1 Cor 13:11a; cp. bc; Mk 10:15; Eph 6:6a; Phil 2:22; Col 3:22. ὥς τέκνα φωτὸς περιπατεῖτε walk as (is appropriate for) children of light Eph 5:8; cp. 6:6b. ὥς ἐν ἡμέρᾳ as (it is one's duty to walk) in the daylight Ro 13:13. The Israelites went through the Red Sea ὥς διὰ ξηρᾶς γῆς as (one travels) over dry land Hb 11:29. οὐ λέγει ὥς ἐπὶ πολλῶν ἀλλ' ὥς ἐφ' ἐνός he speaks not as one would of a plurality (s. ἐπί 8), but as of a single thing Gal 3:16.—Ro 15:15; 1 Pt 5:3. Also referring back to οὕτως (GrBar 6:16 ὥς γὰρ τὰ δίστομα οὕτως καὶ ὁ ἀλέκτωρ μηνύει τοῖς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ like articulate beings the rooster informs earth's inhabitants) οὕτως τρέχω ὥς οὐκ ἀδήλως I run as (a person) with a fixed goal 1 Cor 9:26a. Cp. ibid. b; Js 2:12. β ὥς and the words that go w. it can be the subj. or obj., of a clause: γεννηθήτω σοι ὥς θέλεις let it be done (=it will be done) for you as you wish Mt 15:28. Cp. 8:13; Lk 14:22 v.l. (for ὅ; cp. ὥς τὸ θέλημά σου OdeSol 11:21). The predicate belonging to such a subj. is to be supplied in οὐχ ὥς ἐγὼ θέλω (γεννηθήτω) Mt 26:39a.—ἐποίησεν ὥς προσέταξεν αὐτῷ ὁ ἄγγελος he did as (=that which) the angel commanded him (to do) Mt 1:24; cp. 26:19 (on the structure s. RPesch, BZ 10, '66, 220–45; 11, '67, 79–95; cp. the formula Job 42:9 and the contrasting negation Ex 1:17; s. also Ex 3:21f); 28:15.—Practically equivalent to ὅ, which is a v.l. for it Mk 14:72 (JBirdsall, NovT 2, '58, 272–75; cp. Lk 14:22 above). γ ἕκαστος ὥς each one as or according to what Ro 12:3; 1 Cor 3:5; 7:17ab; Rv 22:12. ὥς ἦν δυνατὸς ἕκαστος each person interpreted them as best each could Papias (2:16). δ in indirect questions (X., Cyr. 1, 5, 11 ἀπαίδευτοι ὥς χρὴ συμμάχοις χρήσθαι) ἐξηγούντο ὥς ἐγνώσθη αὐτοῖς ἐν τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου they told how he had made himself known to them when they broke bread together Lk 24:35. Cp. Mk 12:26 v.l. (for πῶς); Lk 8:47; 23:55; Ac 10:38; 20:20; Ro 11:2; 2 Cor 7:15. 2 a conjunction marking a point of comparison, as. This 'as' can have a 'so' expressly corresponding to it or not, as the case may be; further, both sides of the comparison can be expressed in complete clauses, or one or even both may be abbreviated. A ὥς is correlative w. οὕτως=so. οὕτως ... ὥς (so, in such a way) ... as: οὐδέποτε ἐλάλησεν οὕτως ἄνθρωπος ὥς οὗτος λαλεῖ ὁ ἄνθρωπος J 7:46. ὥς ... οὕτως Ac 8:32 (Is 53:7); 23:11; Ro 5:15 (ὥς τὸ παράπτωμα, οὕτως καὶ τὸ χάρισμα, both halves to be completed), 18. ὥς κοινωνοὶ ἐστε τῶν παθημάτων, οὕτως καὶ τῆς παρακλήσεως as you are comrades in suffering, so (shall you be) in comfort as well 2 Cor 1:7. Cp. 7:14; 11:3 v.l.— ὥς ... καὶ as ... so (Plut., Mor. 39e; Ath. 15, 2) Mt 6:10; Ac 7:51; 2 Cor 13:2; Gal 1:9; Phil 1:20. B The clause beginning w. ὥς can easily be understood and supplied in many cases; when this occurs, the noun upon which the comparison depends can often stand alone, and in these cases ὥς acts as a particle denoting comparison. οἱ δίκαιοι ἐκλάμπουσιν ὥς ὁ ἥλιος the righteous will shine out as the sun (shines) Mt 13:43. ὥς ἐπὶ ληστήν ἐξήλθατε συλλαβεῖν με as (one goes out) against a robber, (so) you have gone out to arrest me 26:55 (Mel., P. 79, 574 ὥς ἐπὶ φόνιον λήστην). γίνεσθε φρόνιμοι ὥς οἱ ὄφεις be (as) wise as serpents (are) 10:16b. Cp. Lk 12:27; 21:35; 22:31; J 15:6; 2 Ti 2:17; 1 Pt 5:8. C Semitic infl. is felt in the manner in which ὥς, combined w. a subst., takes the place of a subst. or an adj. α a substantive β as subj. (cp. Da 7:13 ὥς υἱὸς ἀνθρώπου ἦρχετο; cp. 10:16, 18) ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου (ἦν) ὥς θάλασσα ὑαλίνη before the throne there was something like a sea of glass Rv 4:6. Cp. 8:8; 9:7a. ἀφ' ἐνὸς ἐγενήθησαν ὥς ἡ ἄμμος from one man they have come into being as the sand, i.e. countless descendants Hb 11:12. γ as obj. (JosAs 17:6 εἶδεν Ἀσενὲθ ὥς ἄρμα πυρός) ἄδουσιν ὥς ψᾶν they were singing, as it were, a new song Rv 14:3. ἤκουσα ὥς φωνήν I heard what sounded like a shout 19:1, 6abc; cp. 6:1. δ as adjective, pred. (mostly εἶναι, γίνεσθαι ὥς; the latter also in rendering of ἵ to express the basic reality of something; GDelling, Jüd. Lehre u. Frömmigkeit '67, p. 58, on ParJer 9:7) ἐὰν μὴ γένησθε ὥς τὰ παιδία if you do not become child-like Mt 18:3. ὥς ἄγγελοι εἰσιν they are similar to angels 22:30. πᾶσα σὰρξ ὥς χόρτος 1 Pt 1:24. Cp. Mk 6:34; 12:25; Lk 22:26ab; Ro 9:27 (Is 10:22); 29a (Is 1:9a); 1 Cor 4:13; 7:7f, 29–31; 9:20f; 2 Pt 3:8ab (Ps 89:4); Rv 6:12ab al. (cp. GrBar 14:1 ἐγένετο φωνή ὥς βροντή). Sim. also ποιήσόν με ὥς ἓνα τῶν μισθίων σου treat me like one of your day laborers Lk 15:19.—The adj. or adjectival expr. for which this form stands may be used as an attribute πίστιν ὥς κόκκον σινάπεως faith like a mustard seed=faith no greater than a tiny mustard seed Mt 17:20; Lk 17:6. προφήτης ὥς εἷς τῶν προφητῶν Mk 6:15. Cp. Ac 3:22; 7:37 (both Dt 18:15); 10:11; 11:5. ἐγένετο ὥς εἷς τῶν φευγόντων AcPl Ha 5, 18. ἀρνίον ὥς ἐσφαγμένον a lamb that appeared to have been slaughtered Rv 5:6.—In expressions like τρίχας ὥς τρίχας γυναικῶν 9:8a the second τρίχας can be omitted as self-evident (Ps 54:7 v.l.): ἡ φωνὴ ὥς σάλπιγγος 4:1; cp. 1:10; 9:8b; 13:2a; 14:2c; 16:3. D other noteworthy uses α ὥς as can introduce an example ὥς καὶ Ἡλίας ἐποίησεν Lk 9:54 v.l.; cp. 1 Pt 3:6; or, in the combination ὥς γέγραπται, a scripture quotation Mk 1:2 v.l.; 7:6; Lk 3:4; Ac 13:33; cp. Ro 9:25; or even an authoritative human opinion Ac 17:28; 22:5; 25:10; or any other decisive reason Mt 5:48; 6:12 (ὥς καὶ). β ὥς introduces short clauses: ὥς εἰώθει as his custom was Mk 10:1. Cp. Hs 5, 1, 2. ὥς λογίζομαι as I think 1 Pt 5:12. ὥς ἐνομίζετο as was supposed Lk 3:23 (Diog. Just., A I, 21, 6 ὥς προέφημεν). γ The expr. οὕτως ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ ὥς ἄνθρωπος βάλῃ τὸν σπόρον Mk 4:26 may well exhibit colloquial syntax; but some think that ἄν (so one v.l. [= ἐάν, which is read by many mss.]) once stood before ἄνθρωπος and was lost inadvertently. S. the comm., e.g. EKlostermann, Hdb. z. A GREEK-ENGLISH LEXICON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT AND OTHER EARLY CHRISTIAN LITERATURE

The New Testament was produced in a world that was concerned with lexicography, and attempts to explain various terms and practices appear already in the New Testament itself (e.g. John 1:38; Mark 7:3-4). As early Christians endeavored to understand the Bible and proclaim its message, it was natural that they should offer lexical observations in their sermons, letters, commentaries, and various treatises. They eventually began to produce not only bilingual biblical manuscripts (such as Codex Claromontanus) but also bilingual glossaries to biblical texts (such as that preserved in Chester Beatty Codex Ac. 1499). With the invention of printing, New Testament lexicography entered a new phase and numerous lexicons of the New Testament were produced in various languages during the last centuries.

With the publication of this edition of Bauer's lexicon, a milestone in New Testament lexicography as also in Danker's career as a New Testament lexicographer has been reached. Although this edition is based on the previous English editions and makes judicious use of the sixth edition of Bauer's Greek-German lexicon, it bears Danker's lexical stamp and is thus appropriately referred to on the cover as BDAG, with Danker's name next to Bauer's (Bauer – Danker – Arndt – Gingrich). Whether you're a scholar, teacher or want to start with a strong Greek foundation, this is undoubtedly the lexicon you want in your library. The Bauer, Danker, Arndt, and Gingrich Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament is the most comprehensive and highly revered lexicon for studying New Testament Greek. Its mastery is abundantly clear by its domination of citations in academic papers and inclusion in virtually every graduate-level Greek class.
